HITLER ASKS HUNGARY FOR RIGHT TO SEND ARMY THROUGH COUNTRY INTO THE BALKANS

Admiral Keyes Blames Government for British Losses

National Naval Hero Leads Opposition to Chamberlain, Churchill

Declares Admiralty Rebuffed His Plan To Force Trondheim Fjord with Sea Power

By DREW MIDDLETON

London, May 7 (AP) — Opposition to the Chamberlain cabinet united tonight behind the challenging leadership of a national naval hero who took the British conservative citadel to its foundations by blaming Neville Chamberlain's Government's "shocking inepitude" for the admitted failure of the Norwegian venture.

Admiral of the fleet Sir Roger John Brownlow Keyes, a national Conservative (government) member of parliament, led the assault with the declaration that the Admiralty stifled his plan to force Trondheim fjord with sea power—and action which he said might have won land and sea triumphs over Germany instead of defeat and withdrawal.

His declaration tonight capped the first momentous and stormy day of the two-day House of Commons debate on the Norwegian affair.

Attacks Cabinet

Admiral Roger, his uniform glistening with medals he won in the World War, made his attack on the cabinet and especially on First Lord of the Admiralty, Winston Churchill a few hours after Prime Minister Chamberlain had announced new powers for Churchill in an effort to save the government.

Behind the stocky Churchill figure and the popular magic of the Churchill name remained between the Chamberlain cabinet and disaster.

The First Lord, on whose shoulders the prime minister unequivocally placed the burden of henceforth personally directing grand strategy on land, sea and in the air, is to report tomorrow to the government critics.

Chamberlain Forces Crumbling

He will need all his powers of oratory for when the House rose today after seven and one-half hours of fiery debate, the men who have ruled Britain under Chamberlain since May 28, 1937, saw their line of defense crumbling fast.

Mr. Chamberlain's hour-long statement frankly admitting failure in the Norway and warning of a new German attack on Britain itself; and War Secretary Oliver Stanley's rambling explanation of the expedition whose history the average Britain already knows too well were overshadowed by opposition criticism from many directions.

Admiral Keyes' scornful words that "if we had used our fleet courageously" eclipsed in bitterness other attacks such as Labor leader Clement Attlee's that the "failures" in the cabinet be dismissed, and Liberal Captain Sir Archibald Sinclair's

State Democrats To Bury Hatchet, Leaders Declare

Map Plans To Present an Unbroken Front in Congress

Baltimore, May 7 (AP)—Party harmony promised tonight to replace personal rivalry as Maryland's Democratic leaders mapped plans to fight for preservation of an unbroken Democratic front in Congress.

William Curran, one of the leaders of the faction that supported Howard Bruce, Democratic National Committeeman, in his unsuccessful campaign to win the party's nomination from Senator George L. Radcliffe, said he was "certain Radcliffe will have behind him a united Democratic party."

In a message conceding his defeat last night Bruce promised his support to the winner and during the campaign, Governor Herbert R. O'Conor, stumping for Bruce, pledged his efforts to the nominee, whichever it might be.

With less than a score of the state's 1309 polling places unreported, Radcliffe's margin tonight topped 78,000 popular votes and he appeared certain of 99 of the state convention's 149 votes.

In 1292 polling places, Radcliffe received 173,685 votes, while Bruce polled 95,028. Vincent Gierttowski, Baltimore steel worker who was the third candidate on the ticket, had 2,408.

Republicans Name Nice

Former Governor Harry W. Nice demonstrated that he had not lost his grip with the free state's Republicans by capturing the Senatorial nomination in his contest with Former Mayor William F. Broening of Baltimore.

With about 250 polling places unreported, Nice held a popular vote total of 40,084 to Broening's 27,230.

In convention votes, Nice was certain of 93, Broening of 32 and 24 were still in doubt.

District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey, only candidate in either presidential preference primary, rolled past the 40,000 vote mark in his bid for the state's sixteen Republican national convention ballots. There were 5,687 votes for an uninstructed delegation.

Doubtful Races Decided

Two of the congressional races that appeared in doubt hours after the polls closed last night were considered definite tonight, with

Townsend Group Loses in Indiana

Indianapolis, May 7. (AP)—Incomplete return from today's Indiana primary indicated defeat for efforts of the Townsend old age pension organization to unseat Congressman Charles A. Halleck and George W. Gillie, both Republicans.

The youthful Halleck, who, with Gillie, incurred the enmity of the pension planners by voting against their proposed legislation, forged well ahead of his Townsend-supported opponent, Frederick Landis, Jr., for the Second District nomination as returns were tabulated tonight.

Returns from 96 of the district's 411 precincts gave Halleck 6,374, Landis 3,464.

The towering Gillie, a former sheriff, did even better in the Fourth District, which includes Fort Wayne, the state's second city. He had better than 12-to-1 lead over the Townsend candidate, Lawyer J. Fred Greene, who was running third.

Returns from 121 of the district's 311 precincts gave Gillie 14,822; Norman Sweet 1,059, Greene 1,036.

Believed To Be Seeking Jumping Off Places To Attack England

By J. M. ROBERTS, JR.

New York, May 7 (AP)—Two German columns are advancing toward the Netherlands from Bremen and Dusseldorf, a highly reliable source said here tonight, adding that they were the cause of intense military preparations and disruption of the low country's international communications.

This source, kept informed from Europe despite rigid restrictions against communications in the area involved, was the same which advised the Associated Press a short time previously that the Netherlands minister in Washington had been ordered to take control of Holland's interests outside the mother country in event of a clash with Germany.

Follansbee, W. Va., May 7, (AP) — A terrific explosion killed two men today and destroyed a 150,000 gallon cargo of tar oil aboard a Jones & Laughlin steel corporation barge at the Ohio river dock here today.

Investigators attributed the explosion to contact of the barge with another empty oil barge aboard which Gordon Bare, 28, of Follansbee, and Benjamin Owens, 60, of Hooverson Heights, were working. One was using an electric torch.

House Votes Further Consideration Of Hatch Political Practices Bill

Washington, May 7 (AP) — The House Judiciary Committee, reversing itself, voted today to give further consideration to the Hatch political practices bill which Chairman Sumners (D-Tex) later denounced as "infamous" and as tending toward a Hitlerian form of centralized government.

With Sumners not voting, the committee decided on a 14 to 11 roll call vote to take the bill "from the table," thus reviving it as a live committee issue. This undid a 14 to 10 secret vote of last Wednesday to shelve it.

Chairman against Bill

A few hours later, the chairman arose in the House to say in emphatic language that he opposed the measure's chief provision, curbing political activities of all state employes to whose pay the federal government contributes.

Arguing that states' rights would be infringed, he shouted:

"Whose business is it to tell the people of my state what they can do? Have we got to come up here and have some two-by-four tell a free people what they can do?

"The philosophy of this bill is to say to these little communities that if you can't do anything, let Uncle Sam come down and do it. x x x It's a question of free government which will remain here only when people stay here to preserve it. x x x

"I can't believe that our people have so degenerated that we've got to have Uncle Sam to go down there and keep them from being crooked in some little election."

Scores Newspapers

Referring to some newspapers' criticism of the committee's secret vote of last week Sumner remarked that "if they had let me alone, I wouldn't be saying those things—at least not so much."

Rep. Murdock (D-Utah) one of the measure's proponents on the committee, declared that the decision to reconsider was "definite indication" that the committee would approve the bill.

Rep. Creal (D-Ky), opposing the bill as "a further intrusion into the political rights of the average man," said the vote did not mean "a darn thing."

A northern British Port, May 7 (AP)—An Allied expeditionary force from Namsos, Norway, landed intact today despite an attack by thirty-nine German bombers which sank three destroyers—the British Afridi, the French Bison and the Polish Grom.

Naval losses were comparatively small, and of the soldiers in convoy not a single man was lost.

With two other Americans, Bonny Powell, Fox movietone cameraman, and Arthur Menken, Paramount newsreel photographer, who were taken aboard at Namsos Thursday night at the urgent suggestion of British headquarters, I witnessed the entire battle last Friday when Nazi planes dived at the convoy.

One German plane was shot down.

Flagship Escapes

The convoy flagship, which was headquarters of British and French officers, narrowly escaped when a bomb hit the water fifty yards to port. A series of incendiary bombs also narrowly missed.

The Bison was struck and the wounded and survivors were taken aboard another ship.

Shortly thereafter, the bombers reassembled and dived on the Afridi. They hit her. She listed badly and the survivors were picked up by other ships.

After the rescues were made the power-divers reappeared.

One, in a perfect spot to be concealed by the glare of the sun, dived nearly to the funnel tips and loosed a fatal bomb on the Afridi. She went down.

Six German planes appeared again, but excellent defense fire drove them off before they could drop a single explosive.

The troops were taken aboard the transports at Namsos under very difficult conditions and by the light of a fire started by a German bomb earlier in the day.

Germany and Italy Said To Be Prepared To Send Huge Forces into Southeastern Europe

By ROBERT B. PARKER

Budapest, May 8 (Wednesday) (AP)—The official Hungarian news agency published a report today that Germany has asked the Hungarian government for the right to send troops through the country.

This report was circulated shortly after diplomats in the Balkans had reported a strong British drive to line up a Balkan "defensive alliance" of Yugoslavia, Rumania, Bulgaria, Greece and Turkey to all stand together against any aggression.

Belgrade Dispatch Quoted

The Hungarian news agency, in reporting the German request, reproduced a dispatch which originally was published in a Belgrade, Yugoslavia, newspaper, Politika, which in turn had credited it to its Budapest correspondent.

Several times in the past inspired Hungarian newspapers, as well as the news agency, have taken such round-about methods to tell Hungarians what is going on inside their own country.

Germany, Italy Prepared

Simultaneously, the newspaper, Utro, in Safia, Bulgaria, which has been called the mouthpiece of Nazi Germany in Bulgaria, printed a Berlin dispatch declaring Germany and Italy were prepared to send huge forces into southeastern Europe at the first sign of British-French activity in that area.

The dispatch which was quoted by the Hungarian agency said that according to certain reports in Budapest the Germans had asked passage through Hungary for their troops but that so far the report could not be verified.

"In case the Allied troops violated ony of the Balkan countries' frontiers, the Reich will send an ultimatum to that country demanding it choose immediately one or the other belligerent camp," Utro said.

"In the event the country in question failed to answer with appropriate speed the Reich government would be forced to undertake any measures it thought advisable.

Roosevelt Ticket Leads 3 Others In Early California Primary Vote

San Francisco, May 7 (AP) — The Roosevelt third term "harmony" ticket took a long lead over three other Democratic slates in early returns tonight from the California presidential primary election.

Scattered returns from 3,025 out of the state's 13,511 precincts gave the Roosevelt delegation approximately three votes for every one cast for all the others in the Democratic contest.

The ticket pledged to Vice President John Nance Garner stood in second place, but not far ahead of the uninstructed "ham and eggs" slate headed by Willis Allen. A Liberal-left wing uninstructed group professing New Deal principles was in the wake.

Republican Vote Large

Republicans, having only an uninstructed delegation to vote for, nevertheless appeared to be piling up a sizeable vote.

Capturing the California delegation was considered so important that Secretary of the Interior Ickes came to San Francisco in an effort to bring harmony to warring party factions. Under his direction a "harmony slate" pledged to vote for the renomination of Roosevelt was drafted.

However, Lieut. Governor Ellis Patterson left the Roosevelt ticket to form one of his own pledged to an "anti-war" plank and improved social legislation. Congressman Lee Geyer remained on the Roosevelt ticket but advocated the election of Patterson's slate.

Oppose Own Election

Two of Patterson's delegates opposed their own election. Chelen V. Eckerson urged election of Roosevelt delegates. Ray Howell campaigned for the "ham-and-eggs" slate.

The "ham-and-eggs" list was pledged to work for a plank and a candidate favoring the self-redeeming warrant plan for old age pensions. It has twice been defeated by California voters.

The Garner ticket was the only slate pledged to an avowed candidate.

The Republican ticket was nominally pledged to State Senator Jerrold Seawell. He previously had arranged to release the delegates as soon as the ballots were counted. The Republicans made no effort to bring out a vote.

Berlin, May 7 (AP)—Germany's controlled press reported tonight an alleged British-French scheme to strike in southeastern Europe no later than May 20.

Some sources called this press activity a propaganda foundation for fixing guilt in advance in case the European war should spread in that direction.

The German newspapers splashed what purported to be an account of a telephone conversation between

A. J. Wilkinson, of Huntington, who presided, referred to Carl Andrews, Democratic candidate for governor, and Kump as "statehouse" stooges" and said "I'd rather be bossed by John L. Lewis than by that gas crowd in Charleston."

House Votes Further Consideration Of Hatch Political Practices Bill

Washington, May 7 (AP) — The House Judiciary Committee, reversing itself, voted today to give further consideration to the Hatch political practices bill which Chairman Sumners (D-Tex) later denounced as "infamous" and as tending toward a Hitlerian form of centralized government.

With Sumners not voting, the committee decided on a 14 to 11 roll call vote to take the bill "from the table," thus reviving it as a live committee issue. This undid a 14 to 10 secret vote of last Wednesday to shelve it.

Chairman against Bill

A few hours later, the chairman arose in the House to say in emphatic language that he opposed the measure's chief provision, curbing political activities of all state employes to whose pay the federal government contributes.

Arguing that states' rights would be infringed, he shouted:

"Whose business is it to tell the people of my state what they can do? Have we got to come up here and have some two-by-four tell a free people what they can do?

"The philosophy of this bill is to say to these little communities that if you can't do anything, let Uncle Sam come down and do it. x x x It's a question of free government which will remain here only when people stay here to preserve it. x x x

"I can't believe that our people have so degenerated that we've got to have Uncle Sam to go down there and keep them from being crooked in some little election."

Scores Newspapers

Referring to some newspapers' criticism of the committee's secret vote of last week Sumner remarked that "if they had let me alone, I wouldn't be saying those things—at least not so much."

Rep. Murdock (D-Utah) one of the measure's proponents on the committee, declared that the decision to reconsider was "definite indication" that the committee would approve the bill.

Rep. Creal (D-Ky), opposing the bill as "a further intrusion into the political rights of the average man," said the vote did not mean "a darn thing."

Roosevelt Ticket Leads 3 Others In Early California Primary Vote

San Francisco, May 7 (AP) — The Roosevelt third term "harmony" ticket took a long lead over three other Democratic slates in early returns tonight from the California presidential primary election.

Scattered returns from 3,025 out of the state's 13,511 precincts gave the Roosevelt delegation approximately three votes for every one cast for all the others in the Democratic contest.

The ticket pledged to Vice President John Nance Garner stood in second place, but not far ahead of the uninstructed "ham and eggs" slate headed by Willis Allen. A Liberal-left wing uninstructed group professing New Deal principles was in the wake.

Republican Vote Large

Republicans, having only an uninstructed delegation to vote for, nevertheless appeared to be piling up a sizeable vote.

Capturing the California delegation was considered so important that Secretary of the Interior Ickes came to San Francisco in an effort to bring harmony to warring party factions. Under his direction a "harmony slate" pledged to vote for the renomination of Roosevelt was drafted.

However, Lieut. Governor Ellis Patterson left the Roosevelt ticket to form one of his own pledged to an "anti-war" plank and improved social legislation. Congressman Lee Geyer remained on the Roosevelt ticket but advocated the election of Patterson's slate.

Oppose Own Election

Two of Patterson's delegates opposed their own election. Chelene V. Eckerson urged election of Roosevelt delegates. Ray Howell campaigned for the "ham-and-eggs" slate.

The "ham-and-eggs" list was pledged to work for a plank and a candidate favoring the self-redeeming warrant plan for old age pensions. It has twice been defeated by California voters.

The Garner ticket was the only slate pledged to an avowed candidate.

The Republican ticket was nominally pledged to State Senator Jerrold Seawell. He previously had arranged to release the delegates as soon as the ballots were counted. The Republicans made no effort to bring out a vote.

Berry Winning In Lonaconing Town Election

James Crosser Trailing, Other Incumbents Appear Elected

Lonaconing, May 8 (Special) — Incumbert town officials at Lonaconing appeared headed for re-election this morning, with one exception, on the basis of incomplete returns in the annual election.

With 550 ballots counted at midnight out of a total of 802 cast, Mayor D. Clarkson Laird had a comfortable lead over William F. Lyden. Laird, seeking his third term as mayor, had garnered 353 votes, to Lyden's 171.

Newcomer Winning

James Crosser, the third councilman seeking re-election, appeared doomed to go down in defeat before a heavy vote piled up by William H. Berry, a newcomer to Lonaconing politics.

At midnight, Berry had received 314 votes to Crosser's 251, and the consensus was that Crosser could not overtake this lead.

Clinton Spiker, the fifth man in the race, trailed badly with 101.

Simeon Hutchinson was far ahead of his two rivals in his bid for re-election as bailiff. Hutchinson received 336 votes, compared to 117 for Albert Stevenson and 83 for Hugh S. Kirkwood.

Vote Heavy

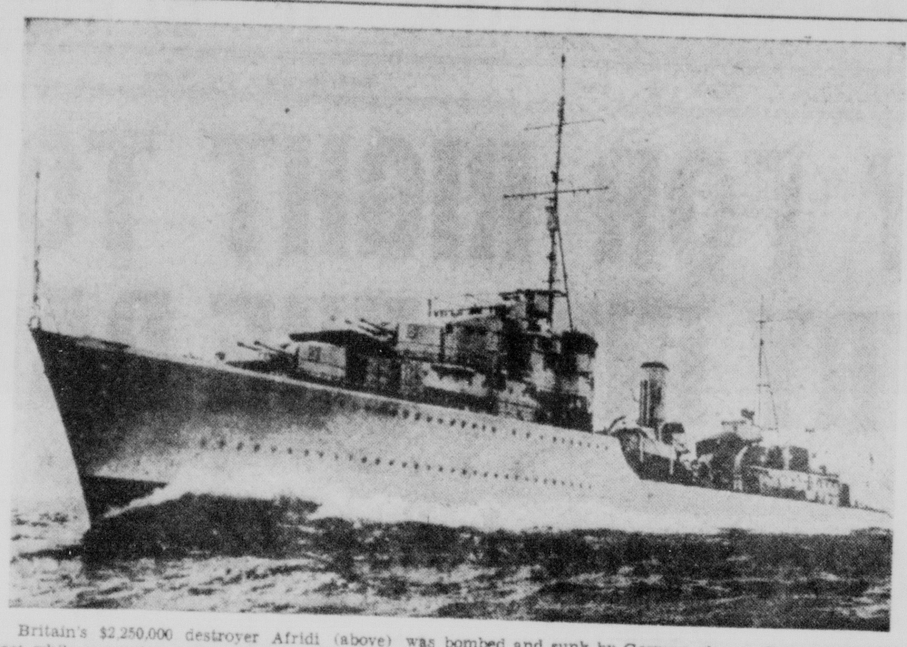

The election pulled out a good vote, with better than sixty-five per cent of the registered voters casting ballots. Out of a city registration of 1,218, 802 votes were cast.

Holdover members of the town council are Harry Lane, Henry Mc Larkey and Douglas Waddell. Half of the six-man body is elected annually.

Judges of the election were Daniel Stakem, Samuel James and Adam Byers. Clerks were Edward Stevenson and James Creighton.

Election officials expected to have the count complete by 2:30 a. m., but the final figures are not expected to change the picture painted by the preliminary figures.

DESTROYER SUNK BY GERMAN AIR BOMB

Britain's $2,250,000 destroyer Afridi (above) was bombed and sunk by German planes off the Norwegian coast while convoying troops withdrawn from Namsos, it was officially admitted by the Admiralty. The warship normally carried 215 officers and men. Launched in 1938, she was 355 feet long, was listed at 1,870 tons.

INTERPRETING THE WAR NEWS

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

Prime Minister Chamberlain retains his post, but at the price of elevating Winston Churchill to what amounts to a role of commander-in-chief of all British military services.

That is the picture Chamberlain drew before a jeering House of Commons Tuesday in discussing the reorganization which has stemmed from the blow he admitted British military prestige had been dealt in Norway. While war policy making will remain a function of the prime minister and his cabinet, its execution by the three military services falls upon Churchill.

On the basis of this change, Chamberlain seems to have weathered the worst storm of his political career. It did not still his critics, in a House turbulent with indignation over the retreat from Trondheim, but it averted for the moment either Chamberlain's resignation or a drastic revision of his cabinet on a world-war coalition basis.

How such divided responsibility can work out in practice remains to be seen. Churchill's star is clearly in the ascendancy while Chamberlain's is on the wane; yet in accepting it, he also assumes responsibility for seeing that in any future clashes with the Nazis, British naval, air and army power will operate in closest harmony to match German military skill.

It goes without saying that Churchill did not accept his new responsibilities without assurances that he would be given a free hand in the military execution of major policy decisions.

Aside from that, there is a new and grave Allied warning both to Germany and to Italy in the new Churchill assignment and in the uproar of parliamentary criticism over the Norwegian campaign.

Mussolini is put on notice that Britain is prepared to meet aggressively any Italian move in the Mediterranean designed to aid the Nazis. Britain's dander is up. There can be no doubt of that in Mussolini's mind now.

Germans Advance

"for Leeuwarden and Arnhem." This would mean that the actual German objective is believed known in Holland, since Leeuwarden is in Friesland province, not far from the northeast coast and the Frisian islands which would provide jumping off places for planes attacking England.

Arnhem, on the other hand, is inside southern Holland, about ten miles north of the Belgian border, and is connected with Germany by rail.

If this advice were correct, Germany would be preparing another "scissors" movement such as it used so effectively in Poland—sharp, inward thrusts toward strategic points, the invading forces to spread outsidewise to occupy intervening territory after reaching their first objectives.

Although there was no other indication of interruption of communications with Berlin, Associated Press messages from New York to the German capital had gone unacknowledged since shortly after 7 p. m., E.S.T.

Holland Will Fight

Holland was prepared for a last ditch fight, the New York source said, although realizing that the present German movement might not actually touch the Netherlands border.

There was said to be a strong possibility that it was merely a feint, such as, the informant said, was used last week to draw the British fleet into the Mediterranean.

But Germany, this source continued, was known to desire bases on the English channel from which to attack England, to complement those obtained in Norway. He said there was no way to tell tonight whether the time had arrived.

He revealed at the same time that the possibility of bringing children of the Dutch royal family to the United States for safety had been discussed, but that the reply had been "we do not run. The family stays with the people. Stays to fight."

The officers fared no better than the privates, several sleeping on iron decks for the entire five-day voyage.

On Saturday, May 4, there was no sign of German aircraft, but a bad submarine scare was experienced and a hasty search was made. During the scare a British patrol plane appeared, greatly raising the soldiers' morale (which never lagged much) to a new pitch.

Later the same day, a series of Bristol Blenheim bombers (British) appeared.

By this time some system had been devised aboard ship. When one company received corned beef hash, another got marmalade and bread. With considerable swapping the men made out a meal.

The officers received exactly the same rations and bore exactly the same sufferings as the men.

Apple Blossoms Appear at Last, Whole Week Late

Winchester, May 7 — Tom Baldridge, director general of the seventeenth annual Shenandoah Apple Blossom festival held here last week, was informed today by officials of the Winchester Research Laboratory that the great majority of apple trees in this section would be at the height of their bloom by Thursday and Friday of this week.

Early varities of apple trees, especially the duchess variety, have been blooming since last week, and the other varieties have been developing in regular succession.

This city, mecca of thousands of visitors last week during the celebration of the Apple blossom festival, was preparing again this week for the mass of visitors who annually come to see this section carpeted in pink petals.

While some disappointment was expressed over the fact that only the early varieties of the fruit were in bloom during the apple blossom celebration, it was thought that the sight of the 6,000,000 apple trees expected to be in bloom at the end of this week would be compensation enough.

The late bloom this year was attributed to the extended cold weather experienced in this fruit growing section. Usually, according to veteran orchardists, the blossoms reach the height of their bloom about the last week in April or the first of May.

Ex-Tax Department Employes Indicted

Baltimore, May 7 (AP)—Two former city tax department employes were indicted by the grand jury today in connection with a reported $70,000 shortage, while Governor Herbert R. O'Conor directed a state audit of records in the city's auto tax division.

Indicted were Neal Grant, former deputy city collector, and Alfred E. Schmidt, former cashier in the collector's office. Each was charged with nine counts of larceny, embezzlement, receiving stolen goods and conspiracy to defraud the city.

The governor, who declined several days ago to take any action in the case because of the imminence of the state primary, assigned State Auditor Daniel L. Clayland, 3rd. to investigate the records.

Dry Woods Blazing, Warden Warns

Danger of forest fires has become great again, District Forest Warden Urner G. Wigfield warned again last night.

A fire Sunday burned over six acres near Westernport. Monday fires burned seven acres near Westernport, three near Cresaptown, and four along Oldtown road. Yesterday, three acres were burnt over on Green Ridge and seven near Gilmore.

The woods are as dry as they have been all year, Wigfield warned.

Sen. Andrews Leads In Florida Primary

Jacksonville, Fla., May 7 (AP)—United States Senator Charles O. Andrews of Orlando took an early lead in his race for re-nomination in today's Florida Democratic primary.

Francis P. Whitehair, Deland attorney, topped a list of eleven candidates for governor.

Andrews received 5,984 votes in the first 70 of 1,429 precincts reporting. Bernarr MacFadden, Miami Beach magazine publisher and physical culture exponent, was second high with 4,785.

Then came State Railroad Commissioner Jerry Carter of Tallahassee with 3,174; Governor Fred P. Cone with 2,352; Attorney-Author Charles Francis Coe of West Palm Beach with 1,510; and Dr. O. B. Hazen of West Palm Beach with 123.

In the race for governor, 64 precincts gave Whitehair 5,041. State Senator Spessard Holland was second with 4,373 and B. F. Patey of West Palm Beach third with 3,610.

The first returns came in while lines of voters still stood in some polling places to express their preferences on the long ballot which included several other state races, and many county, district and party contests.

B&O Railroad Loadings Highest Since Mid-January

Carloadings on the Baltimore and Ohio last week rose to the highest level since the middle of January, totaling 47,138 cars, as against 44,738 in the preceding period—a gain of 2,400 loads.

Line loadings totaled 30,612 cars, compared with 29,474 for the previous week, and traffic from connections 16,526, against 15,264.

Freight received from connections, moreover, was within 441 cars of the year's top, established during the week of January 13.

As compared with the corresponding period last year, when soft-coal mines were closed, there was an increase of 12,876, or 36.7 percent, in total loads.

Statistics on April traffic showed a total last month of 188,414 cars, compared with 191,278 in March and 142,006 in the like period last year.

Five Indicted on White Slave Charge

Pittsburgh, May 7 (AP)—The Federal grand jury today indicted a man and four women on charges of conspiracy to violate the white slave traffic act by transporting women for immoral purposes between Johnstown, Pa., and Hagerstown, Md.

The five are Joseph Prokop, Catherine Keller, Mary Coleman, Roxie Hudson and Sandra Anderson.

The indictment charged that a house (210 East Washington St.) in Hagerstown was rented on Oct. 14, 1939, and that the Hudson and Anderson women were taken there by automobile four days later from Johnstown

Swedish Steamer Sunk by British

Stockholm, May 8 (Wednesday) (AP)—The Swedish steamer Monark, 1,786 tons, with a German prize crew aboard, was torpedoed by a British submarine yesterday.

The Monark was on its way from Stavanger, Norway, to a German harbor with a load of wood pulp.

Five members of the prize crew were taken aboard the submarine and two others were saved in lifeboats with Swedish crewmen.

The Monark was at Bergen, Norway, when that port was suddenly seized by the Germans at the start of the invasion.

With only two polling places unreported in the First district, Ward had rolled up 13,241 votes and State Senator Dudley G. Roe, 12,512.

Johnson, who campaigned little, received a huge vote—3445 to 293—in Montgomery county, to give him a total, with only nine precincts unreported, of 7,437 votes to 5,636 for Stewart.

Representative Ambrose J. Kennedy, only Democratic congressman who apparently failed of nomination, said he would ask for a recount in the Fourth district if the official vote showed him still trailing John A. Myer by 98 votes.

The blast was heard for two miles, and shook men from a tower on which they were working nearby but none was injured severely. Neither of the barges, both constructed of steel, sank, but the cargo of the loaded one went up in flames.

The wife of Bare came to the scene during the search for the body and was aided away, overcome with emotion.

Norris Calls Hoover "Publicity Hound"

Washington, May 7. (AP)—Criticizing J. Edgar Hoover as "the greatest publicity hound on the American continent," Senator Norris (Ind-Neb) told the Senate today that police methods used by the FBI were a menace to Democratic institutions.

"Hoover has an organization maintained at public expense, writing speeches for him to make," he said. "Copies are sent to practically every newspaper in the United States."

The aim, he said was to create a "furor of adulation and omnipotence." Such a system, he added, eventually will find the secret police "directing the government by tyrranical force instead of protecting the people."

The bitter attack culminated a speech of four and one half hours in which Norris protested methods he said were used by the FBI in arresting a dozen Detroit persons accused of recruiting for the Spanish Loyalist army.

Holland Cancels Military Leaves

The Hague, the Netherlands, May 7 (AP)—Holland's trains were crowded tonight with soldiers and sailors returning to their units after the high command, in a sweeping order had cancelled all army and navy leaves.

Leaves have been withdrawn previously, but this was the first time that virtually no exceptions were made and also the first time that the men were ordered to return to their posts immediately.

Civilian train traffic, beginning tomorrow, will be restricted to facilitate troop movements. Holland has nearly 400,000 men under arms.

Officials described the leave cancellation as "due to the increasing uncertainties of the international situation."

In recent days the government has extended martial law to all of Holland and has interned twenty-one persons to forestall any "fifth column" rising against internal security.

Thus the Netherlands feels she is prepared for any eventuality.

In Belgium, the Netherlands' lowland neighbor, it was stated that cancellation of leaves was not contemplated at present.

Today's order in Holland applied to air force and anti-aircraft leaves as well as those of ground troops and the navy.

Since April 27, approximately one-tenth of the defense forces, or 40,000 men, had been absent from their posts on rotating leave.

Bittner Assails Governor Holt

Logan, W. Va., May 7 (AP) — President Van A. Bittner of District 17, United Mine Workers, renewed his criticism of Governor Homer A. Holt in a political address tonight in which he said present hours and wages of the coal industry were insufficient.

"We are getting $5.60 a day and that is not enough," said Bittner. "We are working seven hours a day and that isn't enough. But we are getting these things by degrees, and we will not go back to $2 a day and 10 hours a day. They will have to destroy our union first, and x x x they can't do it."

Referring to Holt, leader of the "Statehouse" faction of the Democratic party, Bittner, who has spoken in behalf of Senator M. M. Neely for the gubernatorial nomination, declared:

"You have all no doubt heard the governor condemn the United Mine Workers for taking part in the primary. He has accused us of being Stalins and Hitlers.

pleasure" in making the announcement.

"The Republican party," he said, "is the party of private enterprise and welcomes this chance to provide an opportunity for a new industry to stride forward in honest American fashion.

"It was but a few days ago that the New Deal, through its dominated Federal Communications Commission, struck viciously at this very industry by bluntly commanding it to cease its efforts at merchandising.

"We of the Republican party sincerely hope that the public interest accuring to television by reason of its use at the 1940 Republican convention will more than offset the setback given this new industry by the New Deal."

According to estimates by the Companies involved in the convention television operation, some 40,000 persons in New York, New Jersey, Connecticut, Rhode Island, Pennsylvania and Massachusetts in the NBC area, and 3,000 more in and around Philadelphia in the Philco area, will look in on the proceedings — proceedings climaxed by the choice of the Republican Presidential candidate — through this new miracle of mass communication.

The NBC television coverage of the event, according to Alfred H. Morton, Vice President in charge of the medium for NBC, will be the most elaborate ever given anywhere in the world to a single event. Two complete units will be moved from New York to Philadelphia for the event, he said. A newly developed television camera, fitted with highly sensitive lenses, will scan the proceedings on the convention hall floor, while a second setup will televize interviews from a studio.

Italians Deride Chamberlain for His Defense of Loss of Norway

By RALPH JORDAN

Rome, May 7 (AP)—Italians masked their own intentions on war today behind decisive thrusts at Prime Minister Chamberlain's back-to-the wall defense of the British retreat from Norway.

Diplomats, however, anxiously studied the possibility of the war back-firing into the Balkans. Among them was British Ambassador Sir Percy Loraine, just returned from a London visit.

E. W. Playfair, British economic expert, also returned from London to try to find a way for resumption of British-Italian negotiations, stalled for weeks.

Foreign circles assumed that Sir Percy would talk with Foreign Secretary Count Galeazzi Ciano and possibly Premier Mussolini if he has not done so already to explain, among other things, the massing of the British fleet in the Mediterranean.

Some indication of Italy's future position was awaited from Il Duce when he reviews troops of the Rome garrison at the celebration of army day on Thursday.

Signs were lacking, however, of any imminent Italian move. In fact, Count Ciano announced that 11,000 children of Italian parents abroad would be brought to the annual Fascist summer camps despite the international situation.

The Vatican's concern over the possibility of some action in Yugoslavia was indicated by the report that Pope Pius had called Archbishop Armjkije Stepinac of Zagreb to Vatican City for an audience.

Italian newspapers, describing the British parliamentary battle as "the only big fight in which the English are masters in Europe," predicted Britain would lose the war regardless of whether Chamberlain remained or departed.

"Chamberlain in power is a guarantee that the conduct of the war on the French and British side will remain weak, tardy and inconclusive," the Reso Del Carlino of Bologno said.

"This not a war of vindictive umbrella-toting oldsters but of ready, audacious men, hence it is good for his enemies that Chamberlain remain in power up to the end of the war, possibly up to the day of the inevitable British-French defeat."

National

taunt that "Britain is fighting a one-shift war."

Parliamentary strategists, who only an hour before had said only "an unexpected development" could overthrow the conservatives, saw in the speech of a man who is a national hero and an admiral of the fleet something resembling this.

Calls Cost Trifling

Sir Roger declared that in his opinion the cost of forcing Trondheim with the fleet would "have been trifling compared with other operations I have organized and led."

"It was surely worth some risk to win so great a prize," he continued.

He revealed that the Admiralty, which under Churchill is supposed to be devoted to the principles of attack, told him the forcing of Trondheim fjord "was not considered necesary as the army was making progress and the situation in the Mediterranean made it undesirable to risk ships."

He declared he was "astounded" that the naval staff could not realize the attack was doomed to failure unless British ships sunk German destroyers in the fjord.

These and other words of accusations were shouted to a packed house in reply to Chamberlain's hour-long statement in which he offered only one remedy for the nation's faltering war effort — Churchill.

Despite its vicious attack, the Labor party generalship decided not to put a motion of censure. It was considered doubtful, likewise, that there would be a vote of confidence.

The government, which apparently had ridden out the barrage of criticism from Attlee and Sinclair fairly shook, as Sir Roger, stung by Laborite Colonel Josiah C. Wedgworth's allegation that the fleet had gone to the Mediterranean to escape German bombs, turned his battery of scorn and bitterness on his superiors.

"Our general advancing from Steinkjer to Trondheim expected British ships to support him — not two German destroyers who fired on his flank — landed troops behind his advance forces, and captured or destroyed them," he cried.

British Launch

Allies with plans to throw southeast Europe into war.

Yugoslavia, where the Balkan tension is highest, was increasing her men under arms to an estimated 600,000.

The proposed alliance, according to diplomatic informants, would embrace Rumania, Yugoslavia, Bulgaria, Greece and Turkey. These countries would be promised that the Allies would not start war in the Balkans, but that the Allied fleet, now at Alexandria, and the "Weygand army" now assembled in the Near East would furnish help in case the Axis powers atacked.

The British plan is understood to be to open the whole Balkan front at once in such an emergency, rather than let Italy or Germany attack one country at a time.

Yugoslavia Seeks Backing

Yugoslavia, however, still was looking elsewhere for backing. Authoritative Belgrade quarters said trade talks between Yugoslavia and Russia have shifted now to "political subjects" and the Belgrade government is believed moving rapidly for re-establishment of normal diplomatic relations with Russia, broken since 1917.

The sudden departure for Rome of Archbishop Alojzije Stepinac, hightest Catholic prelate in Yugoslavia, led to the belief that Pope Pius XII had summoned him in an endeavor to stave off the danger of the war spreading.

In Hungary, the press gave evidence of the country's solidarity with the Italian-German axis, saying that events in Norway and Denmark had proved that isolated neutrality is no longer possible.

Sources close to the government here insisted Germany and Italy would not go through Hungary in case of hostilities, but would, instead, sweep into Yugoslavia.

Call More Conscripts

Dispatches from Rakek, Yugoslavia, said that country, with 300,000 veteran troops already on Italian and German borders, was calling up more conscripts, constructing new defensive positions to bolster existing concrete works; digging miles of new trenches and erecting tank traps and artillery emblacements.

Peasants helped engineers pour concrete for the new tank barricades while troop and supply trucks rumbled by on the country roads.

It was not, officially, general mobilization, but the army was reported "still growing" after reaching the 600,000 mark.

Other Balkan countries called up men.

Berry Winning In Lonaconing Town Election

James Crosser Trailing, Other Incumbents Appear Elected

Lonaconing, May 8 (Special) — Incumbert town officials at Lonaconing appeared headed for re-election this morning, with one exception, on the basis of incomplete returns in the annual election.

With 550 ballots counted at midnight out of a total of 802 cast, Mayor D. Clarkson Laird had a comfortable lead over William F. Lyden, Laird, seeking his third term as mayor, had garnered 353 votes, to Lyden's 171.

Newcomer Winning

James Crosser, the third councilman seeking re-election, appeared doomed to go down in defeat before a heavy vote piled up by William H. Berry, a newcomer to Lonaconing politics.

At midnight, Berry had received 314 votes to Crosser's 251, and the consensus was that Crosser could not overtake this lead.

Clinton Spiker, the fifth man in the race, trailed badly with 101.

Simeon Hutchinson was far ahead of his two rivals in his bid for re-election as bailiff. Hutchinson received 336 votes, compared to 117 for Albert Stevenson and 83 for Hugh S. Kirkwood.

Vote Heavy

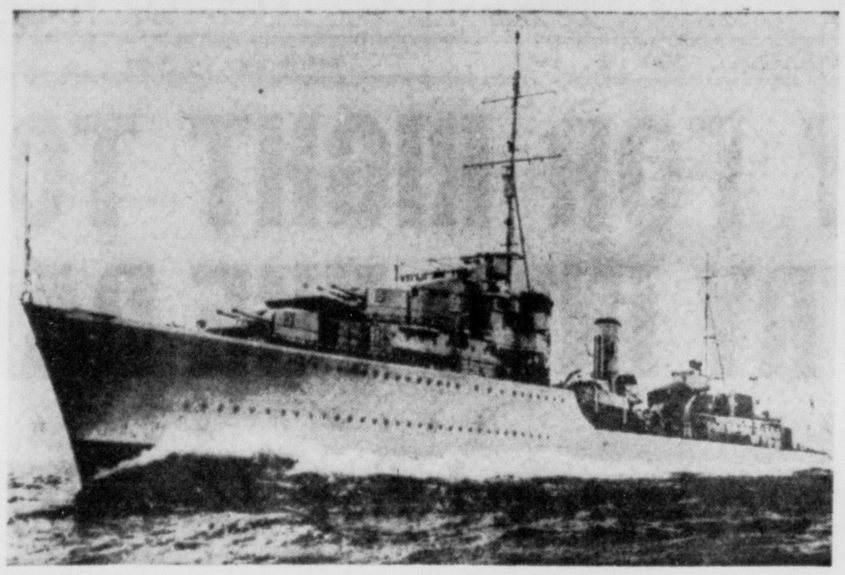

The election pulled out a good vote, with better than sixty-five per cent of the registered voters casting ballots. Out of a city registration of 1,218, 802 votes were cast.

Holdover members of the town council are Harry Lane, Henry Mc Larkey and Douglas Waddell. Half of the six-man body is elected annually.

Judges of the election were Daniel Stakem, Samuel James and Adam Byers. Clerks were Edward Stevenson and James Creighton.

Election officials expected to have the count complete by 2:30 a. m., but the final figures are not expected to change the picture painted by the preliminary figures.

DESTROYER SUNK BY GERMAN AIR BOMB

Britain's $2,250,000 destroyer Afridi (above) was bombed and sunk by German planes off the Norwegian coast while convoying troops withdrawn from Namsos, it was officially admitted by the Admiralty. The warship normally carried 215 officers and men. Launched in 1938, she was 355 feet long, was listed at 1,870 tons.

INTERPRETING THE WAR NEWS

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

The storm of criticism evoked by failure of the Allied campaign in Norway has left Britain under a virtual twin war leadership.

Prime Minister Chamberlain retains his post, but at the price of elevating Winston Churchill to what amounts to a role of commander-in-chief of all British military services.

That is the picture Chamberlain drew before a jeering House of Commons Tuesday in discussing the reorganization which has stemmed from the blow he admitted British military prestige had been dealt in Norway. While war policy making will remain a function of the prime minister and his cabinet, its execution by the three military services falls upon Churchill.

On the basis of this change, Chamberlain seems to have weathered the worst storm of his political career. It did not still his critics, in a House turbulent with indignation over the retreat from Trondheim, but it averted for the moment either Chamberlain's resignation or a drastic revision of his cabinet on a world-war coalition basis.

How such divided responsibility can work out in practice remains to be seen. Churchill's star is clearly in the ascendancy while Chamberlain's is on the wane; yet in accepting it, he also assumes responsibility for seeing that in any future clashes with the Nazis, British naval, air and army power will operate in closest harmony to match German military skill.

It goes without saying that Churchill did not accept his new responsibilities without assurances that he would be given a free hand in the military execution of major policy decisions.

Aside from that, there is a new and grave Allied warning both to Germany and to Italy in the new Churchill assignment and in the uproar of parliamentary criticism over the Norwegian campaign.

Mussolini is put on notice that Britain is prepared to meet aggressively any Italian move in the Mediterranean designed to aid the Nazis. Britain's dander is up. There can be no doubt of that in Mussolini's mind now.

Germans Advance

"for Leeuwarden and Arnhem." This would mean that the actual German objective is believed known in Holland, since Leeuwarden is in Friesland province, not far from the northeast coast and the Frisian islands which would provide jumping off places for planes attacking England.

Arnhem, on the other hand, is inside southern Holland, about ten miles north of the Belgian border, and is connected with Germany by rail.

If this advice were correct, Germany would be preparing another "scissors" movement such as it used so effectively in Poland—sharp, inward thrusts toward strategic points, the invading forces to spread outsidewise to occupy intelvening territory after reaching their first objectives.

Although there was no other indication of interruption of communications with Berlin, Associated Press messages from New York to the German capital had gone unacknowledged since shortly after 7 p. m., E.S.T.

Holland Will Fight

Holland was prepared for a last ditch fight, the New York source said, although realizing that the present German movement might not actually touch the Netherlands border.

There was said to be a strong possibility that it was merely a feint, such as, the informant said, was used last week to draw the British fleet into the Mediterranean.

But Germany, this source continued, was known to desire bases on the English channel from which to attack England, to complement those obtained in Norway. He said there was no way to tell tonight whether the time had arrived.

He revealed at the same time that the possibility of bringing children of the Dutch royal family to the United States for safety had been discussed, but that the reply had been "we do not run. The family stays with the people. Stays to fight."

ed for half the number taken aboard.

The officers fared no better than the privates, several sleeping on iron decks for the entire five-day voyage.

On Saturday, May 4, there was no sign of German aircraft, but a bad submarine scare was experienced and a hasty search was made. During the scare a British patrol plane appeared, greatly raising the soldiers' morale (which never lagged much) to a new pitch.

Later the same day, a series of Bristol Blenheim bombers (British) appeared.

By this time some system had been devised aboard ship. When one company received corned beef hash, another got marmalade and bread. With considerable swapping the men made out a meal.

The officers received exactly the same rations and bore exactly the same sufferings as the men.

Apple Blossoms Appear at Last, Whole Week Late

Winchester, May 7 — Tom Baldridge, director general of the seventeenth annual Shenandoah Apple Blossom festival held here last week, was informed today by officials of the Winchester Research Laboratory that the great majority of apple trees in this section would be at the height of their bloom by Thursday and Friday of this week.

Early varities of apple trees, especially the duchess variety, have been blooming since last week, and the other varieties have been developing in regular succession.

This city, mecca of thousands of visitors last week during the celebration of the Apple blossom festival, was preparing again this week for the mass of visitors who annually come to see this section carpeted in pink petals.

While some disappointment was expressed over the fact that only the early varieties of the fruit were in bloom during the apple blossom celebration, it was thought that the sight of the 6,000,000 apple trees expected to be in bloom at the end of this week would be compensation enough.

The late bloom this year was attributed to the extended cold weather experienced in this fruit growing section. Usually, according to veteran orchardists, the blossoms reach the height of their bloom about the last week in April or the first of May.

Ex-Tax Department Employes Indicted

Baltimore, May 7 (AP)—Two former city tax department employes were indicted by the grand jury today in connection with a reported $70,000 shortage, while Governor Herbert R. O'Conor directed a state audit of records in the city's auto tax division.

Indicted were Neal Grant, former deputy city collector, and Alfred E. Schmidt, former cashier in the collector's office. Each was charged with nine counts of larceny, embezzlement, receiving stolen goods and conspiracy to defraud the city.

The governor, who declined several days ago to take any action in the case because of the imminence of the state primary, assigned State Auditor Daniel L. Clayland, 3rd, to investigate the records.

Dry Woods Blazing, Warden Warns

Danger of forest fires has become great again, District Forest Warden Urner G. Wigfield warned again last night.

A fire Sunday burned over six acres near Westernport. Monday fires burned seven acres near Westernport, three near Cresaptown, and four along Oldtown road. Yesterday, three acres were burnt over on Green Ridge and seven near Gilmore.

The woods are as dry as they have been all year, Wigfield warned.

Sen. Andrews Leads In Florida Primary

Jacksonville, Fla., May 7 (AP)—United States Senator Charles O. Andrews of Orlando took an early lead in his race for re-nomination in today's Florida Democratic primary.

Francis P. Whitehair, Deland attorney, topped a list of eleven candidates for governor.

Andrews received 5,984 votes in the first 70 of 1,429 precincts reporting. Bernarr MacFadden, Miami Beach magazine publisher and physical culture exponent, was second high with 4,785.

Then came State Railroad Commissioner Jerry Carter of Tallahassee with 3,174; Governor Fred P. Cone with 2,352; Attorney-Author Charles Francis Coe of West Palm Beach with 1,510; and Dr. O. B. Hazen of West Palm Beach with 123.

In the race for governor, 64 precincts gave Whitehair 5,041. State Senator Spessard Holland was second with 4,373 and B. F. Patey of West Palm Beach third with 3,610.

The first returns came in while lines of voters still stood in some polling places to express their preferences on the long ballot which included several other state races, and many county, district and party contests.

B&O Railroad Loadings Highest Since Mid-January

Carloadings on the Baltimore and Ohio last week rose to the highest level since the middle of January, totaling 47,138 cars, as against 44,738 in the preceding period—a gain of 2,400 loads.

Line loadings totaled 30,612 cars, compared with 29,474 for the previous week, and traffic from connections 16,526, against 15,264.

Freight received from connections, moreover, was within 441 cars of the year's top, established during the week of January 13.

As compared with the corresponding period last year, when soft-coal mines were closed, there was an increase of 12,676, or 36.7 percent, in total loads.

Statistics on April traffic showed a total last month of 188,414 cars, compared with 191,278 in March and 142,006 in the like period last year.

Five Indicted on White Slave Charge

Pittsburgh, May 7 (AP)—The Federal grand jury today indicted a man and four women on charges of conspiracy to violate the white slave traffic act by transporting women for immoral purposes between Johnstown, Pa., and Hagerstown, Md.

The five are Joseph Prokop, Catherine Keller, Mary Coleman, Roxie Hudson and Sandra Anderson.

The indictment charged that a house (210 East Washington St.) in Hagerstown was rented on Oct. 14, 1939, and that the Hudson and Anderson women were taken there by automobile four days later from Johnstown

Swedish Steamer Sunk by British

Stockholm, May 8 (Wednesday) (AP)—The Swedish steamer Monark, 1,786 tons, with a German prize crew aboard, was torpedoed by a British submarine yesterday.

The Monark was on its way from Stavanger, Norway, to a German harbor with a load of wood pulp.

Five members of the prize crew were taken aboard the submarine and two others were saved in lifeboats with Swedish crewmen.

The Monark was at Bergen, Norway, when that port was suddenly seized by the Germans at the start of the invasion.

Rep. David J. Ward winning renomination in the First, Eastern Shore, district, and Walter Johnson, the "Big Train" of baseball fame, holding a big margin over A. Charles Stewart of Allegany county in the Sixth, Western Maryland, district.

With only two polling places unreported in the First district, Ward had rolled up 13,241 votes and State Senator Dudley G. Roe, 12,512.

Johnson, who campaigned little, received a huge vote—3445 to 293—in Montgomery county, to give him a total, with only nine precincts unreported, of 7,437 votes to 5,636 for Stewart.

Representative Ambrose J. Kennedy, only Democratic congressman who apparently failed of nomination, said he would ask for a recount in the Fourth district if the official vote showed him still trailing John A. Myer by 98 votes.

into the river, but a cneck-up later indicated only two victims.

The blast was heard for two miles, and shook men from a tower on which they were working nearby but none was injured severely. Neither of the barges, both constructed of steel, sank, but the cargo of the loaded one went up in flames.

The wife of Bare came to the scene during the search for the body and was aided away, overcome with emotion.

Foreman Mack McCurdy, 45, had left the scene only a few minutes before the explosion and was only 150 feet up the river bank when the oil let go. Volunteer firemen aided in extinguishing the flames.

Norris Calls Hoover "Publicity Hound"

Washington May 7. (AP)—Criticizing J. Edgar Hoover as "the greatest publicity hound on the American continent," Senator Norris (Ind-Neb) told the Senate today that police methods used by the FBI were a menace to Democratic institutions.

"Hoover has an organization maintained at public expense, writing speeches for him to make," he said. "Copies are sent to practically every newspaper in the United States."

The aim, he said was to create a "furor of adulation and omnipotence." Such a system, he added, eventually will find the secret police "directing the government by tyrranical force instead of protecting the people."

The bitter attack culminated a speech of four and one half hours in which Norris protested methods he said were used by the FBI in arresting a dozen Detroit persons accused of recruiting for the Spanish Loyalist army.

Boy Falls from Swing Breaks His Wrist

A tumble from a swing yesterday sent 14-year-old Philip Portmess to Allegany hospital with a broken left wrist. The boy, son of Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Portmess, 228 North Mechanic street, was given emergency treatment and released.

Holland Cancels Military Leaves

The Hague, the Netherlands, May 7 (AP)—Holland's trains were crowded tonight with soldiers and sailors returning to their units after the high command, in a sweeping order had cancelled all army and navy leaves.

Leaves have been withdrawn previously, but this was the first time that virtually no exceptions were made and also the first time that the men were ordered to return to their posts immediately.

Civilian train traffic, beginning tomorrow, will be restricted to facilitate troop movements. Holland has nearly 400,000 men under arms.

Officials described the leave cancellation as "due to the increasing uncertainties of the international situation."

In recent days the government has extended martial law to all of Holland and has interned twenty-one persons to forestall any "fifth column" rising against internal security.

Thus the Netherlands feels she is prepared for any eventuality.

In Belgium, the Netherlands' lowland neighbor, it was stated that cancellation of leaves was not contemplated at present.

Today's order in Holland applied to air force and anti-aircraft leaves as well as those of ground troops and the navy.

Since April 27, approximately one-tenth of the defense forces, or 40,000 men, had been absent from their posts on rotating leave.

Bittner Assails Governor Holt

Logan, W. Va., May 7 (AP) — President Van A. Bittner of District 17, United Mine Workers, renewed his criticism of Governor Homer A. Holt in a political address tonight in which he said present hours and wages of the coal industry were insufficient.

"We are getting $5.60 a day and that is not enough," said Bittner. "We are working seven hours a day and that isn't enough. But we are getting these things by degrees, and we will not go back to $2 a day and 10 hours a day. They will have to destroy our union first, and x x x they can't do it."

Referring to Holt, leader of the "Statehouse" faction of the Democratic party, Bittner, who has spoken in behalf of Senator M. M. Neely for the gubernatorial nomination, declared:

"You have all no doubt heard the governor condemn the United Mine Workers for taking part in the primary. He has accused us of being Stalins and Hitlers.

"Why, Senator Neely was serving the state of West Virginia in 1912 when Holt was in knee trousers."

pleasure" in making the announcement.

"The Republican party," he said, "is the party of private enterprise and welcomes this chance to provide an opportunity for a new industry to stride forward in honest American fashion.

"It was but a few days ago that the New Deal, through its dominated Federal Communications Commission, struck viciously at this very industry by bluntly commanding it to cease its efforts at merchandising.

"We of the Republican party sincerely hope that the public interest accuring to television by reason of its use at the 1940 Republican convention will more than offset the setback given this new industry by the New Deal."

According to estimates by the Companies involved in the convention television operation, some 40,000 persons in New York, New Jersey, Connecticut, Rhode Island, Pennsylvania and Massachusetts in the NBC area, and 3,000 more in and around Philadelphia in the Philco area, will look in on the proceedings—proceedings climaxed by the choice of the Republican Presidential candidate — through this new miracle of mass communication.

The NBC television coverage of the event, according to Alfred H. Morton, Vice President in charge of the medium for NBC, will be the most elaborate ever given anywhere in the world to a single event. Two complete units will be moved from New York to Philadelphia for the event, he said. A newly developed television camera, fitted with highly sensitive lenses, will scan the proceedings on the convention hall floor, while a second setup will televize interviews from a studio.

Italians Deride Chamberlain for His Defense of Loss of Norway

By RALPH JORDAN

Rome, May 7 (AP)—Italians masked their own intentions on war today behind decisive thrusts at Prime Minister Chamberlain's back-to-the wall defense of the British retreat from Norway.

Diplomats, however, anxiously studied the possibility of the war back-firing into the Balkans. Among them was British Ambassador Sir Percy Loraine, just returned from a London visit.

E. W. Playfair, British economic expert, also returned from London to try to find a way for resumption of British-Italian negotiations, stalled for weeks.

Foreign circles assumed that Sir Percy would talk with Foreign Secretary Count Galeazzi Ciano and possibly Premier Mussolini if he has not done so already to explain, among other things, the massing of the British fleet in the Mediterranean.

Some indication of Italy's future position was awaited from Il Duce when he reviews troops of the Rome garrison at the celebration of army day on Thursday.

Signs were lacking, however, of any imminent Italian move. In fact, Count Ciano announced that 11,000 children of Italian parents abroad would be brought to the annual Fascist summer camps despite the international situation.

The Vatican's concern over the possibility of some action in Yugoslavia was indicated by the report that Pope Pius had called Archbishop Armjkije Stepinac of Zagreb to Vatican City for an audience.

Italian newspapers, describing the British parliamentary battle as "the only big fight in which the English are masters in Europe," predicted Britain would lose the war regardless of whether Chamberlain remained or departed.

"Chamberlain in power is a guarantee that the conduct of the war on the French and British side will remain weak, tardy and inconclusive," the Reso Del Carlino of Bologno said.

"This not a war of vindictive umbrella-toting oldsters but of ready, audacious men, hence it is good for his enemies that Chamberlain remain in power up to the end of the war, possibly up to the day of the inevitable British-French defeat."

National

taunt that "Britain is fighting a one-shift war."

Parliamentary strategists, who only an hour before had said only "an unexpected development" could overthrow the conservatives, saw in the speech of a man who is a national hero and an admiral of the fleet something resembling this.

Calls Cost Trifling

Sir Roger declared that in his opinion the cost of forcing Trondheim with the fleet would "have been trifling compared with other operations I have organized and led."

"It was surely worth some risk to win so great a prize," he continued.

He revealed that the Admiralty, which under Churchill is supposed to be devoted to the principles of attack, told him the forcing of Trondheim fjord "was not considered necesary as the army was making progress and the situation in the Mediterranean made it undesirable to risk ships."

He declared he was "astounded" that the naval staff could not realize the attack was doomed to failure unless British ships sunk German destroyers in the fjord.

These and other words of accusations were shouted to a packed house in reply to Chamberlain's hour-long statement in which he offered only one remedy for the nation's faltering war effort — Churchill.

Despite its vicious attack, the Labor party generalship decided not to put a motion of censure. It was considered doubtful, likewise, that there would be a vote of confidence.

The government, which apparently had ridden out the barrage of criticism from Attlee and Sinclair fairly shook, as Sir Roger, stung by Laborite Colonel Josiah C. Wedgworth's allegation that the fleet had gone to the Mediterranean to escape German bombs, turned his battery of scorn and bitterness on his superiors.

"Our general advancing from Steinkjer to Trondheim expected British ships to support him — not two German destroyers who fired on his flank — landed troops behind his advance forces, and captured or destroyed them," he cried.

British Launch

Allies with plans to throw southeast Europe into war.

Yugoslavia, where the Balkan tension is highest, was increasing her men under arms to an estimated 600,000.

The proposed alliance, according to diplomatic informants, would embrace Rumania, Yugoslavia, Bulgaria, Greece and Turkey. These countries would be promised that the Allies would not start war in the Balkans, but that the Allied fleet, now at Alexandria, and the "Weygand army" now assembled in the Near East would furnish help in case the Axis powers atacked.

The British plan is understood to be to open the whole Balkan front at once in such an emergency, rather than let Italy or Germany attack one country at a time.

Yugoslavia Seeks Backing

Yugoslavia, however, still was looking elsewhere for backing. Authoritative Belgrade quarters said trade talks between Yugoslavia and Russia have shifted now to "political subjects" and the Belgrade government is believed moving rapidly for re-establishment of normal diplomatic relations with Russia, broken since 1917.

The sudden departure for Rome of Archbishop Alojzije Stepinac, hightest Catholic prelate in Yugoslavia, led to the belief that Pope Pius XII had summoned him in an endeavor to stave off the danger of the war spreading.

In Hungary, the press gave evidence of the country's solidarity with the Italian-German axis, saying that events in Norway and Denmark had proved that isolated neutrality is no longer possible.

Sources close to the government here insisted Germany and Italy would not go through Hungary in case of hostilities, but would, instead, sweep into Yugoslavia.

Call More Conscripts

Dispatches from Rakek, Yugoslavia, said that country, with 300,000 veteran troops already on Italian and German borders, was calling up more conscripts, constructing new defensive positions to bolster existing concrete works; digging miles of new trenches and erecting tank traps and artillery emblacements.

Peasants helped engineers pour concrete for the new tank barricades while troop and supply trucks rumbled by on the country roads.

It was not, officially, general mobilization, but the army was reported "still growing" after reaching the 600,000 mark.

Other Balkan countries called up men.

Army, navy and air corps specialists were mobilized in Greece.

Principal To Conduct Classes for Parents

Principal Victor D. Heisey, of Fort Hill high school, will conduct a series of classes on "Christian Parenthood in a Changing World", to be held at the First Presbyterian church beginning Sunday at 10 a. m.

The course will run for about six weeks, and is open to all parents, who should be able to draw valuable assistance from Mr. Heisey's experience as head of the county's largest high school. Mr. Heisey is also a teacher in the church school.

Netherlands Cuts Communication by Outgoing Phones

Lines Reserved Part Time for Use of Government

Amsterdam, May 8, (Wednesday) (AP), The Netherlands cut off outgoing telephone calls to points abroad from 10 p. m. night until 8 a. m. (2 a. m. today

It was officially explained the telephone lines were reserved during those hours for the use the government which yesterday cancelled all army, navy, air and anti-aircraft leaves as a defense precaution

Telephone calls to the Netherlands from abroad were not similarly restricted.

Telegraphic service was only partially disturbed. Telephone service tonight also will be stopped at the same hours as last night, it was announced.

Test of "Glmite", Set for May 16

Baltimore, May 7 (AP)— An exclusive test" of the power of "Glmite", the liquid oxygen-carbon explosive invented by Lester P. Barlow of Baltimore, has been tentatively set for May 16 at the Aberdeen proving ground of the War Department.

Circuit Judge C. Gus Grason yesterday dismissed an injunction application of a Pet magazine which sought to prevent Barlow from using the death-dealing power of the bomb on live goats.

The dismissal order was entered when the magazine failed to file a bond or appear to show cause why the test should not be made.

Barlow claims that the concussion from the blast of his explosive will kill everything within a quarter of a mile.

He said plans called for a 1,000 pound cartridge of glmite to be detonated thirty feet in the air, with the goats tethered at intervals beginning about 200 feet from the point of the blast.

A joint congressional committee of high ranking officials of the army and navy, and others from Washington are expected to attend the test.

Germany Predicted

British Prime Minister Chamberlain and French Premier Reynaud indicating that Allied forces in the Near East commanded by General Maxime Weygand will be ready for "ordered action" by the middle of May.

London official circles called the story fantastic. A French communique said it contained "purely lying allegations."

Nazi Version Doubted

The official Nazi version failed to appear in the Berlin press did not disclose how Germany could have obtained a record of any Chamberlain-Reynaud conversation, but it asserted specifically that the alleged conversation last for just fifteen minutes, starting at 10:10 p. m. Central European time, April 30.

Authorized German sources expressed belief that knowledge of the alleged talk had been "incepted" might disconcert the Allies.

Observers could do little more than speculate on whether the many would take this supposed disclosure as justification for a move into the Balkans or whether it was a Nazi attempt to "smoke out" the Allies on their own intentions.

The account in Berlin newspapers was identical except for the headlines.

According to it, Reynaud assured Chamberlain that Weygand would be ready by May 15, but cautioned him that execution of the "orders action" might be slightly delayed.

Cites Many Difficulties

"Chamberlain in an obviously depressed tone remarked that he was under the impression that they were requiring more time down there than necessary," the German story went on, and Reynaud replied by citing the "many difficulties," especially with Turkey.

Most of the account was presented in indirect discourse.

The Norwegian warfare settled meantime into a race between the Allies, who are striving to complete their domination at Narvik, and German forces rapidly pushing northward in the hope of relieving their comrades beleaguered in the Arctic ore port.

Berlin spokesmen claimed that Nazi advance units had pushed to within miles north from Namos and Grong to reach Mosjoen. They intimated that these and other forces would press on a further eighty-miles to Bodoe, where the terrain is suitable for an air base from which Nazi short range, dive bombers could operate effecively against the British and French, who are closing in around the Germans holding the top positions above Narvik.

Old Horse-Thief Association Goes To the Dogs

Hannibal, Mo. (AP) — Remember the anti-horse thief association?

In this northeastern Missouri area, more than 20 valuable bird dogs disappeared in a year. Dog owners didn't like it. They formed the Marion county Anti-dog Thief Association.

Members pay one dollar a year dues, have a standing reward of $50 for in formation leading to the arrest and conviction of any person stealing a dog from a member.

After the organization was formed only four hunting dogs were stolen or "strayed". Two were found alive, one dead. Members believe the person who stole him may have feared recognition and prosecution. To prevent a recurrence, a reward also has been offered for information leading to the conviction of any person wilfully poisoning a member's dog.

Not a single reward has had to be paid.

Meets Them Both Coming and Going

Inez, Ky. (AP) — Dr. John R. Fairchild, a physician for 50 years, never has issued a bill to a patient, he says.

As both physician and minister—a profession he has engaged in for 38 years—he estimates he has delivered more than 4,000 babies, officiated at about 1,500 funerals and married more than 1,000 couples, many of whom he brought into the world.

The State Primary a Step Toward a Graver Issue

THE VAST POWER AND PRESTIGE of the federal machine was effectively demonstrated in the noisily fought contest for the Democratic nomination for United States senator, which furnished the chief excitement in the primary election held Monday in this state. In consequence, the incumbent senator, George L. Radcliffe, easily won another nomination. Therein is to be found a lesson for Republicans and anti-New Dealers, which should not be lost upon them in the coming campaign.

By the nature of the Democratic fighting—squabbling, perhaps, is the better term for it—a wealth of ammunition is left for the use of Republicans and anti-New Dealers in the election campaign. Seldom have so many personalities, ugly charges, bitter recriminations and downright mudslinging characterized a campaign battle anywhere at any time. All the charges made against Senator Radcliffe will come home to roost like so many chickens—perhaps more like crows—and the opposition forces will not overlook any opportunities in that respect. The same thing would have been true had the Bruce forces won. Both sides carry the tar from the same stick.

In winning the Republican senatorial nomination, former Governor Harry W. Nice came out as party members in Allegany county had fully expected, but if more Republicans had gone to the polls in this county as well as elsewhere, his majority would doubtless have been greatly increased on the basis of the ratio attained. He campaigned effectively and can be expected to do so in the election campaign.

Allegany county seems to have been left out in the congressional race on the Republican side, as the result chiefly of the fact that Republicans generally were apathetic here as well as elsewhere in the state and did not turn out at the polls. Thus Walter Johnson, of Montgomery county, was able to take the nomination from A. Charles Stewart, of Frostburg, his leading contender. While Republicans of this county may regret that it thus again loses its old prestige in the congressional field, the selection of Johnson is acceptable all the way around. He is well equipped for congressional service, particularly with respect to his sane, common sense views on governmental policies, and Republicans of the district can rally enthusiastically to his support in the campaign.

Much of what occupied attention, or was forced upon public attention, in the primary campaign just ended, had little to do with the larger and graver issues with which citizens will be confronted in the election campaign. Relative qualifications of candidates, these having been passed upon, will resolve upon the issues represented by the nominees and their party organizations.

The chief of these issues is, of course, whether the New Deal totalitarianism, with its dismal record of failure and its destructive tendencies, is to be allowed to swallow up our traditional republican form of government or whether private initiative and enterprise, individual liberties and equal opportunities are to be surrendered to an all-powerful central government commanded by a small and selfish group of cockeyed radicals who have virtually destroyed the Democratic party.

There are many indications that voters, both Republicans and traditional Democrats, will rally in this grave crisis thus to be faced and will vote to preserve traditional American doctrines, rights and institutions.

Is "Too Temperamental" And "Dangerous"

IT is not so much his record of failure in domestic affairs that discounts the Roosevelt third term movement in the opinion of the editor of the Putnam County, O., Gazette, as it is the president's temperamental qualities. Some believe the former a sufficient deterrent, but many share also the view of the Ohio editor.

"Why it is necessary to elect Roosevelt for a third term on account of the war," says the Ohio editor, "is beyond us. It would seem to the writer this is the very reason he should not be re-elected. He is too dangerous and temperamental, too anxious to get in the game himself, to be a safe man in the danger zone.

"What is needed is a president of calmer nature and cooler judgment, who would not be hurried or propagandized into a situation Americans do not favor. No Hotspur is wanted at this juncture, in fact anything else but, and this circumstance will doubtless be taken into consideration by his countrymen, when they come to the polls.

"We are taking it for granted that Roosevelt will be the New Deal nominee, as he seems to be its unanimous choice. If he should be elected, you can just get ready to send your boy to Europe to fight for 'civilization' this time."

The Gazette editor seems to have stated this phase of the case rather pointedly.

When a Woman's Hat Is a Basket

THERE probably would be much more criticism of the type of hat currently worn by women if it were not for two outstanding factors. The first is the natural timidity of man in expressing his true opinion of the clothes worn by his wife or sweetheart; the second is his inherent inability to describe objects that bear no resemblance to anything that he has ever seen before.

To some extent, both of these inhibitions have been relieved through the wisdom of a woman magistrate, Anna M. Kross of New York City, who took judicial cognizance of the fact that "most of us do wear crazy, ridiculous hats," when she absolved of crime a defendant who had been arrested for telling a woman patron sitting in front of him in a theater to "take off that basket." There is no offense in calling a hat a basket, the magistrate ruled.

Since the defendant was dismissed there can be no appeal from the magistrate's disposition of this particular case. And in view of the fact that the judge was a woman, men can quote the decision bravely. The magistrate's acceptance of the comparison of the hat to a basket widens the horizon of criticism, allowing unimaginative man to resort to the commonplace articles of field and factory for things that might possibly endure comparison.

But those who prefer to be meticulous in their criticism probably will have as much difficulty as ever.

Women of Canada Are Versatile in War

RECORDS compiled through the voluntary registration of Canadian women for service in the national emergency indicate that the women of the Dominion possess an amazing variety of technical skills. Some of those registered were airplane mechanics in England during the last war, a number had experience in the intelligence service, one lady had worked as a butcher, grocer, ammunition plant worker and censor, and one vouchsafed the information that she was an experienced operator of a concrete mixer.

Others have registered as air pilots, architects, camouflage experts, chemists, dental mechanics, physicians, radio operators, telegraph operators, telegraph technicians, translators and air raid precaution workers. A large number of English women in the Dominion have had experience as workers in fish canneries. The first 10,000 names tabulated indicated that nearly every woman enrolled has a technical training of one sort or another.

If the 10,000 cards already tabulated are any indication of the qualifications of the 250,000 women who have registered, it appears that Canada's industries will not suffer even if a large number of men are called into active army service.

The Small Primary Vote May Not Be a Mystery

One of the apparent mysteries of the primary election was the fact that, after all the hullabaloo about it and all the money that was apparently spent in it, scarcely more than a third of the registered vote turned out at the polls in this county. Calculations show that approximately thirty-four per cent of the total registered Democratic vote was represented in the voting of Monday while the Republicans trailed with approximately twenty-two per cent of the registered party vote. But the mystery may not be so deep after all.

For one thing, the paucity of the voting shows that the hullabalooing was not of the right type. Candidates apparently did not discuss the subjects in which the people are vitally concerned, but strove unwisely to concentrate upon personalities, irrelevancies and trivialities, thus dodging more important questions and missing the concern of the voter. For another thing, the presentation was not placed where it made the desired contacts. Another likelihood is that organizational effort was woefully out of gear. And for still another thing, the money spent was apparently poured into useless channels.

Let it be hoped that party leaders and party workers will derive some useful hints from this rather unsatisfactory showing, which is not a pleasing demonstration of our democratic processes.

Now that science can make candy out of grass, perhaps it won't be so difficult to get Junior busy with the lawn mower.

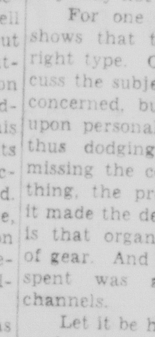

Now that milk is being made from apples some day we may find cowboys riding herd on an orchard.

We never know from one edition to the next what new little neutral we should start feeling sorry for.

If You WANT To Win

By MARSHALL MASLIN

Burn your own bridges if you wish. Put explosives under them, set a match to the wreckage, make it impossible for you to retreat from the position you have taken. Put your back against a wall or fight with a deep river behind you. And thus force yourself to call upon every bit of strength that is in you, every last shred of desperate energy, to win the battle you are fighting.

Marshall Maslin

But don't burn the other fellow's bridges behind HIM. Give him a chance to lose, to retreat gracefully. Don't force HIM to fight desperately and call upon all his reserve strength.

Once a great man said this principle was the secret of the victories he had won. When he was young he had read Carlyle's story of Frederick the Great and somewhere in those three fat volumes he came upon that bit of wisdom and used it ever afterwards in his own struggles. Frederick the Great won battles by NOT burning his opponents' bridges. Whenever possible he gave the enemy the chance to retreat before the force of greater numbers, and did not drive him to fight fiercely for life. Thus he won battles that would have otherwise inevitably been lost.

I have talked to salesmen who boasted that they never took NO for an answer. . . . But I have talked to others, more successful salesmen, who told me that THEY try to keep their prospects from giving a definite NO. Once the other fellow has said no, they say, it is just that much harder to persuade him to say yes. . . . I know that's true. It's been tried on me and it has worked. I've found myself saying yes when I had intended to say no . . . and have wondered how the clever salesman managed it.

And as this is true of war and true of business it is true of every human relation. True in friendship, true in marriage true in the raising of children, true in politics, in governments, in arguments, even in our own conflict with ourselves. . . . You burn your own bridges and you are more likely to win. Burn the other fellow's and you increase your own chances of losing.

Doodler Dreams Seen As Valuable

By EDWIN C. HILL

The writer would appreciate it greatly if someone would let him know where he could find a certain poem about dreams. The identifying line is, "God help a man when the last of his dreams is dead."

Edwin C. Hill

When we read it years ago we thought it was a grand poem and filed it in the inside coat pocket which newspapermen use for a filing case, and then, in some future excavation, it got mixed up with a gas bill or something and so far is lost without trace. What make me think of it is the appearance of certain signs and symptoms of new dreams, or aspirations if you like, in the news and among the populace as you get around town.

* * *

Table Cloth Doodlers

One of the most authentic, although there are many, is the new outbreak of drawings on restaurant tablecloths. Both the event and the interpretation have high sanction from A. A. McVittie, president of the National Restaurant Association. He reports to a Chicago meeting of restaurateurs, with great satisfaction, that the creative urge is again expressing itself on thousands of tablecloths throughout the country. The drawings are of dream-houses, machines, and, most common of all, vigorous and assured ciphering, which winnows a fat percentage out of the dream. Mr. McVittie says that is a sure sign that things are on the up-and-up. Certainly, in the late era of ebullition and abundance the tablecloth artist, architect or statistician was busy and aspiring, and dreaming, of course.

* * *

More Testimony

When we grow too old to dream, we'll have that to remember. But here's more testimony that our dreams aren't dead—this from another cool, precise case-keeper on business, Colonel Leonard P. Ayres, Cleveland banker, economist and business analyst, tells the American Bankers Association, at Hot Springs, Va., that this country is just getting into long pants; that ours is not a "mature" economy and that talk of an economic dead-end is a device of governmental bureaucrats to square a yen for spending taxpayers' money.

It is significant that the Scriptures distinguish between the young men who dream dreams and the old men who see visions. That might be applicable also to young and old systems of economy. The bankers are telling us that we are still young and that the "defeatists" are wrong when they say the "last of our dreams is dead." Will the bankers step out after their slice of the American dream? There are many signs that they will if they can get some ground rules more to their liking. If they get going there will be many others, still young enough to dream, who will be yelling, "Wait for baby!"

* * *

Not Monkey Business

Getting back to those oracular drawings on tablecloths, we distinctly remember that back in the days our earlier efflorescence, which preceded the boom years, the great restaurateur Mouquin was keenly interested in tablecloth scribbling and knew that it wasn't just monkey business. Some of the greatest tablecloth illustrators who ever supplied first aid to laundries used to gather at Mouquin's.

Jo Davidson was a sculptor but he had a knack for caricature and with a few swift strokes would catch a face or an attitude. Frequently with him was Art Young, turning a napkin into a gallery of cherubic drolleries. Arthur Brisbane, frequently their companion, didn't draw pictures, but, in the interest of clear exegesis, he would diagram a syllogism or would visualize simply some foggy abstraction. There, too, were Paul Bartlett, the sculptor; John Flanagan, the medalist, Joseph Pennell, etcher of fame, and the Luke brothers.

Approved by Moquin

Also in the company would be Dr. Maurice Aisen, a Rumanian and a fascinating bouillebaise of chemistry, poetry, philosophy, camaraderie and political economy. His English fell considerably short of the demands and every once in a while he would break down and have to draw a picture on the tablecloth. It frequently was metaphysical, or perhaps it showed why nobody could square the circle. But it happened that Dr. Aisen, incidentally a banker's son, was good at figures, too, and he dreamed and illustrated certain box-office dreams which came through as advertised. He is now one of the leading consulting chemists of America, but still an incorrigible philosopher and tablecloth illustrator.

As above, M. Mouquin, approved highly of all this, for two reasons. First, because it was a phenomenon of good times and second because he knew these artists would come through. He carefully saved many of those tablecloths and napkins. It would be interesting to know what became of them. They would make an interesting exhibit to signalize the start of an era of bigger and better dreams.—Copyright, 1940, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

CRISIS IN THE LIFE OF A HOUSEHOLD PET

Larger Questions Restrain Congress But Inaction Will Benefit Opposition

By MARK SULLIVAN

Washington, May 7.—Congress is in that mood in which it looks forward to something more important than anything Congress itself can do. Partly unconsciously, Congress looks forward to a broader decision than any one decision it can make. It foresees the coming national political events — the national conventions, the presidential nominations, the campaign, and the election—as deciding a broader issue than any one action of Congress on any one bill.

Mark Sullivan

Some such mood is usual at this season. At all times, on the eve of a presidential campaign, Congress tends to postpone action on some measures. Ordinarily, part of the motive is time. Always Congress likes to get through before the national conventions of the two parties. This year, the first of the conventions, the Republican, meets June 24. Some time before that is a probable date for the adjournment of Congress. Ordinarily too, part of the motive for postponing measures is disinclination to take a position on controversial issues a few months before a national election.

Motive Goes Deeper

This year, the motive — or the vague state of mind less tangible than a motive—goes deeper. Congress senses that the months ahead will decide issues far more momentous than any one measure before Congress. There is a possibility that, for the first time in our history, the coming months may see the country pass judgment on the third tradition. Equally large with that issue, the country will pass judgment on the New Deal, as an experiment in society and government, novel to American tradition. Finally there is possibility that the war abroad may pass into a status which calls on America for important decisions. These larger issues ahead cast a shadow on Congress, and account for the likelihood that several of the measures now pending will not be finally acted upon.

This condition works to the disadvantage of the party in power. For most of the more important measures now pending before Congress are attempts to modify laws enacted by the New Deal. They are attempts to reduce the New Deal. If these modifications do not pass, the original laws will stand in full force. To the extent that the original laws are unpopular, to the extent that there is general desire to have them modified, to that extent are a handicap to the party in power, an asset to the opposition. The National Labor Relations act unamended, is a greater campaign argument for the Republicans, than the Labor act amended would be.

Not the Same Thing

It is "the party in power" that suffers. But "the party in power" is not the same thing as the Democratic party. It consists of the Democrats and the New Dealers. In this combination, the Democrats are the greater in number. The relation between the two consists of the Democrats carrying the New Dealers as a handicap. This will be seen by considering the Walter-Logan bill, and its present status.

The Walter-Logan bill is an attempt to restrain the New Deal along its whole front—to restrain it, though not to destroy it. The essence of the New Deal is an extension of the power of government over the individual citizen—without such an extension of the authority of government over the citizen, the New Deal could not exist. This extension of power is embodied in, and is essential to the working of, practically all the New Deal innovations.

To check this extension of authority, the Walter-Logan bill was written. Its purpose is, while permitting the New Deal innovations to continue and function, yet to preserve for the citizen his historic right of appeal, and of protection by a judicial body before which the citizen and the government stand equal.

Vote Shows Wish

The Walter-Logan bill passed the House by 279 to 97, nearly three to one. That is a measure of the wish to have the New Deal modified, restrained.

Especially striking was the division of Democrats on the measure. About 130 Democrats voted in favor, about 93 against. This division —130 to 93—is roughly the proportion of Democrats to New Dealers. Actually the number of New Dealers in the House is less than ninety-three. Some Democrats who voted against the Walter-Logan bill are not New Dealers; they opposed the bill for the reason that it is, by general admission, not expertly written for its purpose.

What should now happen is that the bill should go to the Senate, should there be re-written, and thereafter should come to a vote. But, in these closing weeks, this is not likely to be done. It is probable the country will enter the coming campaign with the Walter-Logan bill not passed. Hence the conditions that gave rise to the demand for the bill, will continue as they were. The Democrats will be obliged to bear the burden of these unpopular conditions.

What is said here of the Walter-Logan bill applies also to the bills which attempt to amend the Wage-Hour act, and the National Labor Relations act. The attempts at amendment are likely to fail. Whatever unpopularity attaches to the laws as they stand will be a handicap to the Democrats, an asset to the Republicans. The New Deal, substantially unmodified, will be an issue in the campaign.

When Children Are "Softies"

Parents Are To Blame, Writer Declares In the Rotarian Magazine

If children today are "softies" and "parasitic," you'll have to blame mothers, dads, and society in general, because "the economic parasitism of children is not of their making," asserts Farnsworth Crowder in a current Rotarian Magazine article.

Dad's argument about the cows he used to milk before breakfast, the cords of wood he split, and the ashes he hauled are as obsolete as button shoes with milk on the apartment doorstep, oil burners, and building janitors. And the "when I was a boy stuff" doesn't create activities to occupy and teach Johnnies and Alyces, Crowder declares.

"Give children something vital to do," he suggests. "Not a hypothetical something, like a textbook problem. Not a make-believe something, like building a toy house. Not a secondhand something, like gleaning experience from a radio or screen. But a something that is relevant to the shelter, the protection, and the support of their own lives." Crowder tells how children in his experience keep the family budget books, assist with household management, and other vital things in a family life which make for happiness and an appreciation of adult problems.

Hitler Kidnaping Not a Good Idea

BY HUGH S. JOHNSON

Hugh Johnson

Washington, May 7.—Nut advocates are beginning to plan to [collect] the nutty offer of a million dollars by Samuel Harden Church, president of the Carnegie Institute, for the capture and delivery of Adolf Hitler unharmed to the League of Nations for trial for "his crimes against the peace and dignity of the world."

The offer and efforts to win the reward are too trivial for comment. But, as an index of war hysteria, is not trivial—especially when a member of the House Foreign Affairs committee says that the offer expressed "feelings that probably are shared by ninety-nine per cent of the American people."

* * *

As Kidnapping Subsidy

Most of are convinced that Hitler is a heel, but how many believe in an American subsidy of international kidnapping? What is proposed here across national boundaries is exactly what, in the so-called Lindbergh law, we made punishable by death if conducted across state lines.

It is attempted to be vindicated by moral indignation. That is a sentiment advanced to justify lynching. It is a violation of international law. We also have American laws which prohibit a recruiting or filibustering against any power with which we are at peace. Filibustering and soldiering-of-fortune are at least above-board and in some sense heroic. This ridiculous attempt at subornation of kidnapping reaches down into the Dillinger underworld to adopt tactics of gangsterism condemned by federal statutes and those of every State. That is the lawless American proposal being broadcast across the world without a word of rebuke from any official source.

Simple War Objective

"Hang the Kaiser and make Germany pay for the war!" that was the slogan either tacitly adopted or permited to go unchallenged in England and France as a statement of war objectives sufficiently simple for popular digestion. Every statesman knew nether was possible but it was good war diet. It returned to haunt them at the Versailles Peace Conference. Riding roughshod over American objections, they made the impossible war-breeding peace. It was forced by one reason, among several, that they were politicians and did not dare wholly repudiate what they had permitted the public to believe. Without infamy they could no more have hung the Kaiser than Abraham Lincoln could have hung Jeff Davis. Yet their attention in suffering such a sentiment in the war years is partly responsible for the curse that has come upon all countries today.

* * *

Actually Attempted

Also, because of that sentiment-seeking, the kind of notoriety that was promised to be fabulously rewarded in the Church-Hitler fantasy—ex-Senator and (now ex-convict) Lee Lee of Tennessee actually attempted to kidnap the Kaiser and came close to doing it. It gave the heart of every Allied and associated power goose-pimples. As Mr. Lincoln hinted about Jefferson Davis, Lee's attempted delivery of the Kaiser to "democracy" would have proved to be a pineapple.

Unlike Jeff Davis, who could have been charged with treason, there was no law or God or man under which the Kaiser could have been tried, much less executed. Terribly destructive and inhuman as have been the acts of Adolf, the discredited and almost non-existent League of Nations has no jurisdiction, sanction, equity or law under which to bring him to trial—much less to sentence him. Certainly no American has an excuse to kidnap him or to procure his snatching.

* * *

Napoleon's Blunder

Flushed with his increasing success and power, Napoleon Bonaparte, who was not particularly bloodthirsty except in battle, did exactly what is suggested here but with more justification in law. He crossed the borders of France, kidnapped the French Duke of Enghien, tried him as a traitor and had him executed. At St. Helena he seemed to agree with the verdict of many of his critics that it was a principal blunder of his career. It shocked the conscience of the world. Mr. Church's absurdity is trivial, but any sucker American approval of it is dangerous.—Distributed by United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

In June an event will occur which has not happened in the United States in nineteen years. A battleship will be launched. Two of them, in fact. They are our first since 1921.

Probably, considering the losses to the British fleet in the present European war, the United States now has the world's most powerful navy. We were in that position once before. At the Washington conference after the World war we proved that we would stop building battleships if others would.

We still feel that way. But if others insist, we have no alternative, and the answer is on the ship-ways at Brooklyn and Philadelphia.

The State Primary a Step Toward a Graver Issue

THE VAST POWER AND PRESTIGE of the federal machine was effectively demonstrated in the noisily fought contest for the Democratic nomination for United States senator, which furnished the chief excitement in the primary election held Monday in this state. In consequence, the incumbent senator, George L. Radcliffe, easily won another nomination. Therein is to be found a lesson for Republicans and anti-New Dealers, which should not be lost upon them in the coming campaign.

By the nature of the Democratic fighting—squabbling, perhaps, is the better term for it—a wealth of ammunition is left for the use of Republicans and anti-New Dealers in the election campaign. Seldom have so many personalities, ugly charges, bitter recriminations and downright mudslinging characterized a campaign battle anywhere at any time. All the charges made against Senator Radcliffe will come home to roost like so many chickens—perhaps more like crows—and the opposition forces will not overlook any opportunities in that respect. The same thing would have been true had the Bruce forces won. Both sides carry the tar from the same stick.

In winning the Republican senatorial nomination, former Governor Harry W. Nice came out as party members in Allegany county had fully expected, but if more Republicans had gone to the polls in this county as well as elsewhere, his majority would doubtless have been greatly increased on the basis of the ratio attained. He campaigned effectively and can be expected to do so in the election campaign.

Allegany county seems to have been left out in the congressional race on the Republican side, as the result chiefly of the fact that Republicans generally were apathetic here as well as elsewhere in the state and did not turn out at the polls. Thus Walter Johnson, of Montgomery county, was able to take the nomination from A. Charles Stewart, of Frostburg, his leading contender. While Republicans of this county may regret that it thus again loses its old prestige in the congressional field, the selection of Johnson is acceptable all the way around. He is well equipped for congressional service, particularly with respect to his sane, common sense views on governmental policies, and Republicans of the district can rally enthusiastically to his support in the campaign.

Much of what occupied attention, or was forced upon public attention, in the primary campaign just ended, had little to do with the larger and graver issues with which citizens will be confronted in the election campaign. Relative qualifications of candidates, these having been passed upon, will resolve upon the issues represented by the nominees and their party organizations.

The chief of these issues is, of course, whether the New Deal totalitarianism, with its dismal record of failure and its destructive tendencies, is to be allowed to swallow up our traditional republican form of government or whether private initiative and enterprise, individual liberties and equal opportunities are to be surrendered to an all-powerful central government commanded by a small and selfish group of cockeyed radicals who have virtually destroyed the Democratic party.

There are many indications that voters, both Republicans and traditional Democrats, will rally in this grave crisis thus to be faced and will vote to preserve traditional American doctrines, rights and institutions.

Is "Too Temperamental" And "Dangerous"

IT is not so much his record of failure in domestic affairs that discounts the Roosevelt third term movement in the opinion of the editor of the Putnam County, O., Gazette, as it is the president's temperamental qualities. Some believe the former a sufficient deterrent, but many share also the view of the Ohio editor.

"Why it is necessary to elect Roosevelt for a third term on account of the war," says the Ohio editor, "is beyond us. It would seem to the writer this is the very reason he should not be re-elected. He is too dangerous and temperamental, too anxious to get in the game himself, to be a safe man in the danger zone.

"What is needed is a president of calmer nature and cooler judgment, who would not be hurried or propagandized into a situation Americans do not favor. No Hotspur is wanted at this juncture, in fact anything else but, and this circumstance will doubtless be taken into consideration by his countrymen, when they come to the polls.

"We are taking it for granted that Roosevelt will be the New Deal nominee, as he seems to be its unanimous choice. If he should be elected, you can just get ready to send your boy to Europe to fight for 'civilization' this time."

The Gazette editor seems to have stated this phase of the case rather pointedly.

When a Woman's Hat Is a Basket

THERE probably would be much more criticism of the type of hat currently worn by women if it were not for two outstanding factors. The first is the natural timidity of man in expressing his true opinion of the clothes worn by his wife or sweetheart; the second is his inherent inability to describe objects that bear no resemblance to anything that he has ever seen before.

To some extent, both of these inhibitions have been relieved through the wisdom of a woman magistrate, Anna M. Kross of New York City, who took judicial cognizance of the fact that "most of us do wear crazy, ridiculous hats," when she absolved of crime a defendant who had been arrested for telling a woman patron sitting in front of him in a theater to "take off that basket." There is no offense in calling a hat a basket, the magistrate ruled.

Since the defendant was dismissed there can be no appeal from the magistrate's disposition of this particular case. And in view of the fact that the judge was a woman, men can quote the decision bravely. The magistrate's acceptance of the comparison of the hat to a basket widens the horizon of criticism, allowing unimaginative man to resort to the commonplace articles of field and factory for things that might possibly endure comparison.

But those who prefer to be meticulous in their criticism probably will have as much difficulty as ever.

Women of Canada Are Versatile in War

Some of those registered were airplane mechanics in England during the last war, a number had experience in the intelligence service, one lady had worked as a butcher, grocer, ammunition plant worker and censor, and one vouchsafed the information that she was an experienced operator of a concrete mixer.

Others have registered as air pilots, architects, camouflage experts, chemists, dental mechanics, physicians, radio operators, telegraph operators, telegraph technicians, translators and air raid precaution workers. A large number of English women in the Dominion have had experience as workers in fish canneries. The first 10,000 names tabulated indicated that nearly every woman enrolled has a technical training of one sort or another.

If the 10,000 cards already tabulated are any indication of the qualifications of the 250,000 women who have registered, it appears that Canada's industries will not suffer even if a large number of men are called into active army service.

The Small Primary Vote May Not Be a Mystery

One of the apparent mysteries of the primary election was the fact that, after all the hullabaloo about it and all the money that was apparently spent in it, scarcely more than a third of the registered vote turned out at the polls in this county. Calculations show that approximately thirty-four per cent of the total registered Democratic vote was represented in the voting of Monday while the Republicans trailed with approximately twenty-two per cent of the registered party vote. But the mystery may not be so deep after all.

For one thing, the paucity of the voting shows that the hullabalooing was not of the right type. Candidates apparently did not discuss the subjects in which the people are vitally concerned, but strove unwisely to concentrate upon personalities, irrelevancies and trivialities, thus dodging more important questions and missing the concern of the voter. And for still another thing, the money spent was apparently poured into useless channels.

Let it be hoped that party leaders and party workers will derive some useful hints from this rather unsatisfactory showing, which is not a pleasing demonstration of our democratic processes.

But I have talked to others, more successful salesmen, who told me that THEY try to keep their prospects from giving a definite NO. Once the other fellow has said no, they say, it is just that much harder to persuade him to say yes. . . . I know that's true. It's been tried on me and it has worked. I've found myself saying yes when I had intended to say no . . . and have wondered how the clever salesman managed it.

And as this is true of war and true of business it is true of every human relation. True in friendship, true in marriage, true in the raising of children, true in politics, in governments, in arguments, even in our own conflict with ourselves. . . . You burn your own bridges and you are more likely to win. Burn the other fellow's and you increase your own chances of losing.

Doodler Dreams Seen As Valuable

By EDWIN C. HILL

The writer would appreciate it greatly if someone would let him know where he could find a certain poem about dreams. The identifying line is, "God help a man when the last of his dreams is dead."

Edwin C. Hill

When we read it years ago we thought it was a grand poem and filed it in the inside coat pocket which newspapermen use for a filing case, and then, in some future excavation, it got mixed up with a gas bill or something and so far is lost without trace. What make me think of it is the appearance of certain signs and symptoms of new dreams, or aspirations if you like, in the news and among the populace as you get around town.

• • •

Table Cloth Doodlers

One of the most authentic, although there are many, is the new outbreak of drawings on restaurant tablecloths. Both the event and the interpretation have high sanction from A. A. McVittie, president of the National Restaurant Association. He reports to a Chicago meeting of restaurateurs, with great satisfaction, that the creative urge is again expressing itself on thousands of tablecloths throughout the country. The drawings are of dream-houses, machines, and, most common of all, vigorous and assured ciphering, which winnows a fat percentage out of the dream. Mr. McVittie says that is a sure sign that things are on the up-and-up. Certainly, in the late era of ebullition and abundance the tablecloth artist, architect or statistician was busy and aspiring, and dreaming, of course.

More Testimony

When we grow too old to dream, we'll have that to remember. But here's more testimony that our dreams aren't dead—this from another cool, precise case-keeper on business. Colonel Leonard P. Ayres, Cleveland banker, economist and business analyst, tells the American Bankers Association, at Hot Springs, Va., that this country is just getting into long pants; that ours is not a "mature" economy and that talk of an economic dead-end is a device of governmental bureaucrats to square a yen for spending taxpayers' money.

It is significant that the Scriptures distinguish between the young men who dream dreams and the old men who see visions. That might be applicable also to young and old systems of economy. The bankers are telling us that we are still young and that the "defeatists" are wrong when they say the "last of our dreams is dead." Will the bankers step out after their slice of the American dream? There are many signs that they will if they can get some ground rules more to their liking. If they get going there will be many others, still young enough to dream, who will be yelling, "Wait for baby!"

Not Monkey Business

Getting back to those oracular drawings on tablecloths, we distinctly remember that back in the days our earlier efflorescence, which preceded the boom years, the great restaurateur Mouquin was keenly interested in tablecloth scribbling and knew that it wasn't just monkey business. Some of the greatest tablecloth illustrators who ever supplied first aid to laundries used to gather at Mouquin's.

Jo Davidson was a sculptor but he had a knack for caricature and with a few swift strokes would catch a face or an attitude. Frequently with him was Art Young, turning a napkin into a gallery of cherubic drolleries. Arthur Brisbane, frequently their companion, didn't draw pictures, but, in the interest of clear exegesis, he would diagram a syllogism or would visualize simply some foggy abstraction. There, too, were Paul Bartlett, the sculptor; John Flanagan, the medalist, Joseph Pennell, etcher of fame, and the Luke brothers.

Approved by Moquin

Also in the company would be Dr. Maurice Aisen, a Rumanian and a fascinating bouillebaise of chemistry, poetry, philosophy, camaraderie and political economy. His English fell considerably short of the demands and every once in a while he would break down and have to draw a picture on the tablecloth. It frequently was metaphysical, or perhaps it showed why nobody could square the circle. But it happened that Dr. Aisen, incidentally a banker's son, was good at figures, too, and he dreamed and illustrated certain box-office dreams which came through as advertised. He is now one of the leading consulting chemists of America, but still an incorrigible philosopher and tablecloth illustrator.

As above, M. Mouquin, approved highly of all this, for two reasons. First, because it was a phenomenon of good times and second because he knew these artists would come through. He carefully saved many of those tablecloths and napkins. It would be interesting to know what became of them. They would make an interesting exhibit to signalize the start of an era of bigger and better dreams.—Copyright, 1940, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

CRISIS IN THE LIFE OF A HOUSEHOLD PET

Larger Questions Restrain Congress But Inaction Will Benefit Opposition

By MARK SULLIVAN

Washington, May 7.—Congress is in that mood in which it looks forward to something more important than anything Congress itself can do. Partly unconsciously, Congress looks forward to a broader decision than any one dicision it can make. It foresees the coming national political events — the national conventions, the presidential nominations, the campaign, and the election—as deciding a broader issue than any one action of Congress on any one bill.

Mark Sullivan

Some such mood is usual at this season. At all times, on the eve of a presidential campaign, Congress tends to postpone action on some measures. Ordinarily, part of the motive is time. Always Congress likes to get through before the national conventions of the two parties. This year, the first of the conventions, the Republican, meets June 24. Some time before that is a probable date for the adjournment of Congress. Ordinarily too, part of the motive for postponing measures is disinclination to take a position on controversial issues a few months before a national election.

Motive Goes Deeper

This year, the motive — or the vague state of mind less tangible than a motive—goes deeper. Congress senses that the months ahead will decide issues far more momentous than any one measure before Congress. There is a possibility that, for the first time in our history, the coming months may see the country pass judgment on the third tradition. Equally large with that issue, the country will pass judgment on the New Deal, as an experiment in society and government, novel to American tradition. Finally there is possibility that the war abroad may pass into a status which calls on America for important decisions. These larger issues ahead cast a shadow on Congress, and account for the likelihood that several of the measures now pending will not be finally acted upon.

This condition works to the disadvantage of the party in power, for most of the more important measures now pending before Congress are attempts to modify laws enacted by the New Deal. They are attempts to reduce the New Deal. If these modifications do not pass, the original laws will stand in full force. To the extent that the original laws are unpopular, to the extent that there is general desire to have them modified, to that extent are a handicap to the party in power, an asset to the opposition. The National Labor Relations act unamended, is a greater campaign argument for the Republicans, than the Labor act amended would be.

Not the Same Thing

It is "the party in power" that suffers. But "the party in power" is not the same thing as the Democratic party. It consists of the Democrats and the New Dealers. In this combination, the Democrats are the greater in number. The relation between the two consists of the Democrats carrying the New Dealers as a handicap. This will be seen by considering the Walter-Logan bill, and its present status.

The Walter-Logan bill is an attempt to restrain the New Deal along its whole front—to restrain it, though not to destroy it. The essence of the New Deal is an extension of the power of government over the individual citizen—without such an extension of the authority of government over the citizen, the New Deal could not exist. This extension of power is embodied in, and is essential to the working of, practically all the New Deal innovations.

To check this extension of authority, the Walter-Logan bill was written. Its purpose is, while permitting the New Deal innovations to continue and function, yet to preserve for the citizen his historic right of appeal, and of protection by a judicial body before which the citizen and the government stand equal.

Vote Shows Wish

The Walter-Logan bill passed the House by 279 to 97, nearly three to one. That is a measure of the wish to have the New Deal modified, restrained.

Especially striking was the division of Democrats on the measure. About 130 Democrats voted in favor, about 93 against. This division —130 to 93—is roughly the proportion of Democrats to New Dealers. Actually the number of New Dealers in the House is less than ninety-three. Some Democrats who voted against the Walter-Logan bill are not New Dealers; they opposed the bill for the reason that it is, by general admission, not expertly written for its purpose.

What should now happen is that the bill should go to the Senate, should there be re-written, and thereafter should come to a vote. But, in these closing weeks, this is not likely to be done. It is probable the country will enter the coming campaign with the Walter-Logan bill not passed. Hence the conditions that gave rise to the demand for the bill, will continue as they were. The Democrats will be obliged to bear the burden of these unpopular conditions.

What is said here of the Walter-Logan bill applies also to the bills which attempt to amend the Wage-Hour act, and the National Labor Relations act. The attempts at amendment are likely to fail. Whatever unpopularity attaches to the laws as they stand will be a handicap to the Democrats, an asset to the Republicans. The New Deal, substantially unmodified, will be an issue in the campaign.

When Children Are "Softies"

Parents Are To Blame, Writer Declares In the Rotarian Magazine

If children today are "softies" and "parasitic," you'll have to blame mothers, dads, and society in general, because "the economic parasitism of children is not of their making," asserts Farnsworth Crowder in a current Rotarian Magazine article.

Dad's argument about the cows he used to milk before breakfast, the cords of wood he split, and the ashes he hauled are as obsolete as button shoes with milk on the apartment doorstep, oil burners, and building janitors. And the "when I was a boy stuff" doesn't create activities to occupy and teach Johnnies and Alyces, Crowder declares.

"Give children something vital to do," he suggests. "Not a hypothetical something, like a textbook problem. Not a make-believe something, like building a toy house. Not a secondhand something, like gleaning experience from a radio or screen. But a something that is relevant to the shelter, the protection, and the support of their own lives." Crowder tells how children in his experience keep the family budget books, assist with household management, and other vital things in a family life which make for happiness and an appreciation of adult problems.

First in Warships

In June an event will occur which has not happened in the United States in nineteen years. A battleship will be launched. Two of them, in fact. They are our first since 1921.

Probably, considering the losses to the British fleet in the present European war, the United States now has the world's most powerful navy. We were in that position once before. At the Washington conference after the World war we proved that we would stop building battleships if others would.

We still feel that way. But if others insist, we have no alternative, and the answer is on the ship-ways at Brooklyn and Philadelphia.

Hitler Kidnaping Not a Good Idea

BY HUGH S. JOHNSON

Hugh Johnson

Washington, May 7.—Nut advertisers are beginning to plan to [illegible] the nutty offer of a million dollars by Samuel Harden Church, president of the Carnegie Institute, for the capture and delivery of Adolf Hitler unharmed to the League of Nations for trial for "his crimes against the peace and dignity of the world."

The offer and efforts to win the reward are too trivial for comment. But, as an index of war hysteria, it is not trivial—especially when a member of the House Foreign Affairs committee says that the offer expressed "feelings that probably are shared by ninety-nine per cent of the American people."

• • •

As Kidnapping Subsidy

Most of are convinced that Hitler is a heel, but how many believe in an American subsidy of international kidnapping? What is proposed here across national boundaries is exactly what, in the so-called Lindbergh law, we made punishable by death if conducted across state lines.

It is attempted to be vindicated by moral indignation. That is a sentiment advanced to justify lynching. It is a violation of international law. We also have American laws which prohibit a recruiting or filibustering against any power with which we are at peace. Filibustering and soldiering-of-fortune are at least above-board and in some sense heroic. This ridiculous attempt at subornation of kidnapping reaches down into the Dillinger underworld to adopt tactics of gangsterism condemned by federal statutes and those of every State. That is the lawless American proposal being broadcast across the world without a word of rebuke from any official source.

Simple War Objective

"Hang the Kaiser and make Germany pay for the war!" that was the slogan either tacitly adopted or permited to go unchallenged in England and France as a statement of war objectives sufficiently simple for popular digestion. Every statesman knew nether was possible but it was good war diet. It returned to haunt them at the Versailles Peace Conference. Riding roughshod over American objections, they made an impossible war-breeding peace. It was forced by one reason, among several, that they were politicians and did not dare wholly repudiate what they had permitted the public to believe. Without infamy they could no more have hung the Kaiser than Abraham Lincoln could have hung Jeff Davis. Yet their attention in suffering such a sentiment in the war years is partly responsible for the curse that has come upon all countries today.

• • •

Actually Attempted

Also, because of that sentiment seeking, the kind of notoriety that was promised to be fabulously rewarded in the Church-Hitler fantasy—ex-Senator and (now ex-convict) Lee Lee of Tennessee actually attempted to kidnap the Kaiser and came close to doing it. It gave the heart of every Allied and associated post goose-pimples. As Mr. Lincoln hinted about Jefferson Davis, Lee's attempted delivery of the Kaiser to "democracy" would have proved to be a pineapple.

Unlike Jeff Davis, who could have been charged with treason, there was no law or God or man under which the Kaiser could have been tried, much less executed. Terribly destructive and inhuman as have been the acts of Adolf, the discredited and almost non-existent League of Nations has no jurisdiction, sanction, equity or law under which to bring him to trial—much less to sentence him. Certainly no American has an excuse to kidnap him or to procure his snatching.

Napoleon's Blunder

Flushed with his increasing success and power, Napoleon Bonaparte, who was not particularly bloodthirsty except in battle, did exactly what is suggested here but with more justification in law. He crossed the borders of France, kidnapped the French Duke of Enghien, tried him as a traitor and had him executed. At St. Helena he seemed to agree with the verdict of many of his critics that it was a principal blunder of his career. It shocked the conscience of the world. Mr. Church's absurdity is trivial, but any sucker American approval of it is dangerous.—Distributed by United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

THE DAILY STORY

FICTION HERO

Two Men and a Girl and a Hero Who Didn't Know Why a Certain Lady Acted the Way She Did

By GEORGE MURRAY

Winston McLean's first impulse, on being told Marcia thought herself in love with him, was to scoff. Secretly flattered, he pretended to wonder what a lovely high school girl could see in a matured bachelor author, no matter how lean and tanned he might be.

"Nonsense, Joey," he told his nephew. "You're the only boy Marcia gives a hoot about. She's been friendly during the few days I've been visiting you. We've swum together, walked together—she has been kind enough to type some of my material for me. But when I leave for New York tomorrow, she'll forget I ever existed."

"You don't know Marcia, I—I wasn't going to tell you this, Uncle Win, I wouldn't, if you understood Marcia better. You don't know how overwhelming she can be. Or how hard it is to change her mind once she makes it up. She's got the idea that you don't know what's best for yourself. And if she can't talk you into marrying her before you go to New York, she's going to follow you. She told me so."

McLean was no longer amused. "Ridiculous. The child ought to be spanked—if she meant it." Another thought came. "Why, Joey, she was just trying to make you jealous—and you fell for it."

Joey's mood didn't change. His answer showed his certainty. "You don't understand Marcia. She isn't flighty, like other girls. We've lived next door to each other all our lives and I know her better than anybody else. She means it, all right." Then, in sudden loyalty, "And she's no child. She's a grown woman."

McLean puzzled a moment, amused a little, pleased a great deal more than he would have admitted, but still objective.

McLane's eyes were on his paper but his thoughts were on Joey's words when he heard Marcia's screen door slam. He knew she would be around the hedge in a few seconds. He tried to think of an opening for the conversation, but failed. Deciding to master their talk from the first word, he plunged: "I'm glad to see you right now, Marcia. I'm stuck for the girl's viewpoint in a story and I need your help. You said something yesterday about knowing and understanding a person. That's a good point. It's easy to know a boy well when you have lived next door to him all your life but how well, for instance, do you think you can know me, whom you met only a few days ago?"

Marcia wasn't confused. Her serene smile was worthy a woman twice her year. "I've known you all my life—from a distance. I got interested in you and your work, at first, because you were related to Joey. Afterward I read everything you wrote—because I loved it. I've even looked up back files of newspapers to read your dispatches when you were in Europe."

"Well—naturally I'm pleased and flattered—but I can't see—"

"A long time ago, in an article about writing, you confessed that most fiction is autobiographical. I can understand that that's true. Anyone who seriously studies the people you write about can get a very good idea of your own character and philosophy and ambitions."

"Wait a minute," McLean tried to stop her. "You took what I wrote too literally. Plots might have a basis in life but you can't judge a writer by his heroes."

"I wouldn't argue it," Marcia said complacently. "I don't know whether it would work in the case of every writer. I do know that everything I had decided about you from your books has proved true. I'm satisfied."

McLean realized he was in deep water. He folded his paper and filled his pipe, stalling for time. That was when the idea came to him.

"Marcia, suppose you do something else for an hour or so while I make a few revisions in my story. Then if you still want to help me, you can type it up while I shop in town this afternoon."

When McLean returned at supper-time he found Joey on the lawn.

"I guess you weren't able to do anything, Uncle Win. Marcia came over to get your manuscript but when I asked her to go for a ride this evening, she said she intended to be with you."

McLean chuckled and spoke confidently: "Cheer up. I can't be sure, but I think we'll find she changed her mind during the afternoon."

"How could she, with you away?"

They both turned at the sound of Marcia's screen door. Before she could turn the hedge, McLean spoke softly: "Get inside, Joey. This will tell the story."

Marcia was startled when she suddenly noticed McLean standing alone in the dusk. She seemed to hesitate, then to change her mind and come on. She held out a package.

"Here's your manuscript, Mr. McLean."

Her tone, her abruptness, her formality hurt McLean even as he realized his ruse has been successful. His impulse was to bare his deceit but hew as restrained by loyalty to Joey. He knew that he should go into the house immediately and close the door forever on their brief relationship — but he couldn't resist asking:

"How do you like the story?"

"It's hero was hateful. The conceit of that old author—thinking he could use his literary popularity as a lure for impressionable girls. A man like that is—unspeakable."

McLean was shocked by the venom of her tone. The success of his trick seemed an empty victory. Mumbling his thanks for the typing, he turned to enter the house. Then was stopped by her command:

"Wait!"

In a flurry of white organdy she was upon him, her arms about his neck. Surprise kept him from responding to her kiss. He caught his breath to stammer:

"What—what—?"

"Darling," came her whisper. "Darling, I love Joey just as much as you do—and in the same way. My love for you is something different. Did you think that silly story fooled me?"—Distributed by United Feature Syndicate.

An Ear for Beauty

By HELEN FOLLETT

GIVE teacher your ears; we'll talk about them. Now that we use them to hold back our sidelocks instead of hiding them beneath them, it is high time we considered what can be done to make them prettier.

Surprising how many different patterns Mama Nature has for ears. Some show extended lobes, some round, fat ones, others no lobes at all. The hearty eater has ruddy ears, the girl who is suffering from malnutrition may have sound receivers so pale they look almost transparent.

The soft tissue in front of the ears is often the stamping ground for the first wrinkles. Watch that territory; if there is a sign of a crinkle, work diligently with the massage cream, tapping, patting, slapping.

Give your ears their proper quota of powder when fluffing it over your celestial countenance. If the lobes are a bit large, touch them with dark-colored rouge which will cast a shadow. When artificial blushes are used on cheeks and chin, the lobes should be included.

Don't wear heavy earrings; they can ruin the contour of the prettiest listeners. Pendants are most becoming to plump, round ears, button designers best for those that are long and narrow. They make proportions better.

The plastic surgeon can correct outstanding ears; he takes a little tuck in the back of them. If this defect is present in childhood, the head should be bandaged at night, or a cap of tapes worn.

The career girl who has a hectic day, comes home tired as a hound dog, is in no condition to enjoy her dinner or digest what she eats properly.

Let her jump into a warm bath, relax there for 10 minutes, give herself a scouring with a heavy brush. After a one minute cold shower, a rubdown with a coarse towel and a friction with a fragrant bath tonic, she will feel tip-top.

Changing the frock makes dinner a more festive occasion. It puts one's mental house in order, makes one forget the jittery day that has worn her to fine frazzles.

German Nationalism Gets Down to ABC's

Berlin (AP) — A campaign for the revival of German script, that angular and hooked handwriting which is the dismay of foreigners, is being started by the intensely nationalistic magazine, "Neues Volk."

The magazine revealed its campaign is another manifestation of the revolt against foreign influences. "Our people, in its handwriting, has achieved an expression of its racial entity free from foreign modification," Neues Volk said.

It regretted that the post-World war generation had largely adopted the Latin script. The contention that the Latin form is better suited to commerce and science was dismissed by he magazine as a "Jewish notion."

I got interested in you and your work, at first, because you were related to Joey. Afterward I read everything you wrote—because I loved it. I've even looked up back files of newspapers to read your dispatches when you were in Europe."

"Well—naturally I'm pleased and flattered—but I can't see—"

"A long time ago, in an article about writing, you confessed that most fiction is autobiographical. I can understand that that's true. Anyone who seriously studies the people you write about can get a very good idea of your own character and philosophy and ambitions."

"Wait a minute," McLean tried to stop her. "You took what I wrote too literally. Plots might have a basis in life but you can't judge a writer by his heroes."

"I wouldn't argue it," Marcia said complacently. "I don't know whether it would work in the case of every writer. I do know that everything I had decided about you from your books has proved true. I'm satisfied."

McLean realized he was in deep water. He folded his paper and filled his pipe, stalling for time. That was when the idea came to him.

"Marcia, suppose you do something else for an hour or so while I make a few revisions in my story. Then if you still want to help me, you can type it up while I shop in town this afternoon."

When McLean returned at suppertime he found Joey on the lawn.

"I guess you weren't able to do anything, Uncle Win. Marcia came over to get your manuscript but when I asked her to go for a ride this evening, she said she intended to be with you."

McLean chuckled and spoke confidently: "Cheer up. I can't be sure, but I think we'll find she changed her mind during the afternoon."

"How could she, with you away?"

They both turned at the sound of Marcia's screen door. Before she could turn the hedge, McLean spoke softly: "Get inside, Joey. This will tell the story."

Marcia was startled when she suddenly noticed McLean standing alone in the dusk. She seemed to hesitate, then to change her mind and come on. She held out a package.

"Here's your manuscript, Mr. McLean."

Her tone, her abruptness, her formality hurt McLean even as he realized his ruse has been successful. His impulse was to bare his deceit but hew as restrained by loyalty to Joey. He knew that he should go into the house immediately and close the door forever on their brief relationship — but he couldn't resist asking:

"How do you like the story?"

"It's hero was hateful. The conceit of that old author—thinking he could use his literary popularity as a lure for impressionable girls. A man like that is—unspeakable."

McLean was shocked by the venom of her tone. The success of his trick seemed an empty victory. Mumbling his thanks for the typing, he turned to enter the house. Then was stopped by her command:

"Wait!"

In a flurry of white organdy she was upon him, her arms about his neck. Surprise kept him from responding to her kiss. He caught his breath to stammer:

"What—what—?"

"Darling," came her whisper. "Darling, I love Joey just as much as you do—and in the same way. My love for you is something different. Did you think that silly story fooled me?"—Distributed by United Feature Syndicate.

An Ear for Beauty

By HELEN FOLLETT

GIVE teacher your ears; we'll talk about them. Now that we use them to hold back our sidelocks instead of hiding them beneath them, it is high time we considered what can be done to make them prettier.

Surprising how many different patterns Mama Nature has for ears. Some show extended lobes, some round, fat ones, others no lobes at all. The hearty eater has ruddy ears, the girl who is suffering from malnutrition may have sound receivers so pale they look almost transparent.

The soft tissue in front of the ears is often the stamping ground for the first wrinkles. Watch that territory; if there is a sign of a crinkle, work diligently with the massage cream, tapping, patting, slapping.

Give your ears their proper quota of powder when fluffing it over your celestial countenance. If the lobes are a bit large, touch them with dark-colored rouge which will cast a shadow. When artificial blushes are used on cheeks and chin, the lobes should be included.

Don't wear heavy earrings; they can ruin the contour of the prettiest listeners. Pendants are most becoming to plump, round ears, button designers best for those that are long and narrow. They make proportions better.

The plastic surgeon can correct outstanding ears; he takes a little tuck in the back of them. If this defect is present in childhood, the head should be bandaged at night, or a cap of tapes worn.

* * *

The career girl who has a hectic day, comes home tired as a hound dog, is in no condition to enjoy her dinner or digest what she eats properly.

Let her jump into a warm bath, relax there for 10 minutes, give herself a scouring with a heavy brush. After a one minute cold shower, a rubdown with a coarse towel and a friction with a fragrant bath tonic, she will feel tip-top.

Changing the frock makes dinner a more festive occasion. It puts one's mental house in order, makes one forget the jittery day that has worn her to fine frazzles.

German Nationalism Gets Down to ABC's

Berlin (AP) — A campaign for the revival of German script, that angular and hooked handwriting which is the dismay of foreigners, is being started by the intensely nationalistic magazine, "Neues Volk."

The magazine revealed its campaign is another manifestation of the revolt against foreign influences. "Our people, in its handwriting, has achieved an expression of its racial entity free from foreign modification," Neues Volk said.

It regretted that the post-World war generation had largely adopted the Latin script. The contention that the Latin form is better suited to commerce and science was dismissed by he magazine as a "Jewish notion."

Annual Hadassah Donar Dinner Will Be Held Tomorrow at the Ali Ghan Club

Rabbi Henry Segal, of Washington, D. C., will be the chief speaker at the second annual Hadassah Donar dinner, which will be held at 6:30 o'clock tomorrow evening at the Ali Ghan Country Club, Baltimore pike.

Rabbi Segal was born in Jerusalem, Palestine, and was graduated as Rabbi from the Yeskivah college of New York city. He holds a bachelor of science degree from the college of the City of New York. He also studied at Columbia university and has held a pulpit in Albany, N. Y. At present he is Rabbi at the B'na Isreal Synagogue in Washington. Having been very active in Zionist work, he now holds the position of vice-president for the second year in the Washington Zionist district.

Mrs. Herman Richmond, president of the Cumberland Chapter of Hadassah, will extend greetings to the guests and members. Mrs. Julius Abramson, of Frostburg, will be toastmastress for the evening. Her son, Chester, will render violin selections and will be accompanied on the piano by Miss Mary Drum.

Rabbi Aaron Lefkowitz, of the B'er Chayim temple, and Rabbi Aaron Garboty, of the Beth Jacob Synagogue, will also be speakers.

Miss Rita Karn will represent the Young Judeas. The invocation will be delivered by Mrs. Aaron Lefkowitz.

Tomorrow's dinner has double significance. It marks the first anniversity of the Rothschild Hadassah University hospital, and secondly, the Cumberland Chapter has selected this occasion to enlighten the onlooker as to what Hadassah stands for.

This brand new hospital was built by a German-Jewish architect, planned with the help of a well-known American hospital administrator, and erected by Palestinian workers who came from almost every corner of the globe. Like the university with which it is affiliated, it stands for the Jewish Renaissance, for the humanities and the sciences, for man's will to progress, man's desire to reach a better life, to seek out the road to greater happiness, for himself, his community, and the larger human family.

To the Jewish scientist and scholar it represents the possibility of work, of study, and of research. To Palestine it means the raising of its medical standards. To American Jewry, which made this hospital possible, it means the culmination of its first stage of development and the beginning of a program which will make the medical center, of which this hospital is a part, one of the greatest institutions of learning, of healing, and of scientific research.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By Shepard Barclay

"The Authority on Authorities"

NOT YET STANDARDIZED

BIDDING is not yet standardized, nor will it ever be, for the very simple reason that human beings who bid can not be standardized. Fine players who think they are using exactly the same system will produce entirely different lines of thought on some deals and consequently take widely variant action. It is this factor that makes bridge a game which will go on and on—the infinite variety in the way that certain clearly understood and agreed principles are applied.

(Dealer: West. North-South vulnerable.)

Twelve players, who had made the best individual season records in the team play of New York's Inter-Club Contract league, were competing for the individual championship at three tables when this deal came along. The bidding and the result were different in all three cases, as follows:

Table 1—

West	North	East	South
Pass	Pass	Pass	1 ♠
Pass	3 ♠	Pass	4 NT
Pass	5 ♦	Pass	5 ♠

Table 2—

West	North	East	South
Pass	Pass	1 ♣	1 ♠
Pass	2 ♠	3 ♣	3 ♠
4 ♣	4 ♠	5 ♣	Dbl

Table 3—

West	North	East	South
Pass	Pass	1 ♣	Dbl
Pass	2 ♠	3 ♣	4 ♠

South's 5-Spade contract at Table 1 was defeated two tricks, by one trick in clubs, two in hearts and one in diamonds. North's jump in spades was criticized as too strong, tempting the slam invitation and overhigh contract.

At Table 2, East made his doubled 5-Clubs for a big East-West top, losing only one trick in diamonds and one in clubs. At Table 3, North made his four spades because East tried to be fancy and led the diamond 10 away from his K.

* * *

Tomorrow's Problem

(Dealer: South. Both sides vulnerable.)

After East takes the first two diamond tricks, then switches to the heart J, how should South reason to find a safe way to make his 3-No Trumps?

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By Shepard Barclay

NOT YET STANDARDIZED

BIDDING is not yet standardized, nor will it ever be, for the very simple reason that human beings who bid can not be standardized. Fine players who think they are using exactly the same system will produce entirely different lines of thought on some deals and consequently take widely variant action. It is this factor that makes bridge a game which will go on and on—the infinite variety in the way that certain clearly understood and agreed principles are applied.

(Dealer: West. North-South vulnerable.)

Twelve players, who had made the best individual season records in the team play of New York's Inter-Club Contract league, were competing for the individual championship at three tables when this deal came along. The bidding and the result were different in all three cases, as follows:

Table 1—

West	North	East	South
Pass	Pass	Pass	1 ♠
Pass	3 ♠	Pass	4 NT
Pass	5 ♦	Pass	5 ♠

Table 2—

West	North	East	South
Pass	Pass	1 ♣	1 ♠
Pass	2 ♠	3 ♣	3 ♠
4 ♣	4 ♠	5 ♣	Dbl

Table 3—

West	North	East	South
Pass	Pass	1 ♣	Dbl
Pass	2 ♠	3 ♣	4 ♠

South's 5-Spade contract at Table 1 was defeated two tricks, by one trick in clubs, two in hearts and one in diamonds. North's jump in spades was criticized as too strong, tempting the slam invitation and overhigh contract.

At Table 2, East made his doubled 5-Clubs for a big East-West top, losing only one trick in diamonds and one in clubs. At Table 3, North made his four spades because East tried to be fancy and led the diamond 10 away from his K.

• • •

Tomorrow's Problem

(Dealer: South. Both sides vulnerable.)

After East takes the first two diamond tricks, then switches to the heart J, how should South reason to find a safe way to make his 3-No Trumps?

"EVERYBODY TALKS ABOUT THE WEATHER"
but Cumberland DOES something about it

"Everybody talks  about the weather, but nobody does anything about it," said Mark Twain. He should have been born a generation later, for today we manufacture  our indoor weather to suit ourselves. Air Conditioning has made this possible. In a few short years, it has grown  from a novel luxury to a modern business necessity. Today's buying public is coming to demand and expect Air Conditioning, and progressive business men are recognizing that fact. It is because of public demand  that our finest trains,  the world's greatest theaters, the most famous restaurants and night clubs,  stores whose names are national bywords, World's Fair Buildings, and even breeze swept steamships  are Air Conditioned. Air Conditioning is accepted and expected. Do you realize  the extent to which this is true right here in Cumberland? There are, or soon will be, in this area more than 40 Air Conditioned stores, restaurants, theaters, tap rooms, beauty parlors, offices, etc., some of which you will find listed on this page.

THE GROWTH OF AIR-CONDITIONING IN CUMBERLAND

The first local installation was made in 1932. Each subsequent year has seen additions, with the greatest increase this spring. When the hot days of 1940 roll around, they will find Cumberland with mechanical cooling facilities equal to the melting of nearly 1,000,000 pounds of ice every twenty-four hours, and this city well out in the van of the national Air Conditioning parade.

The blocks of ice below show the growth of mechanical Air Conditioning in Cumberland in terms of its equivalent in melting ice.

Deceit and the Like in Family Life Caused by Wrong Methods

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph.D

Dear Dr. Myers, " says a writer, "I have a very serious and grave problem before me in the matter of training my children. An ex-school teacher, a lover of children and of child-training, I have had very little difficulty with my family of eight bright, healthy boys and girls, all at school but one baby. My heart is breaking as I tell you I have found deceit and dishonesty in my family.

"I have never punished a child when he admitted truthfully a wrong-doing. I have so much emphasized the truth that this comes as an awful shock to me.

"Six years ago we had perhaps the best business in town, but lost it, and had to cut down in our living. The children were always fed, but perhaps they were hungry for the little extras we were used to. . ."

Then she tells of the neighbor who informed her that one of her boys had bought bananas and had them charged to this neighbor; that another neighbor woman reported another boy who took a bottle of pop from the kitchen as he was delivering a message. "He denied it before her, but she was so sure I took down a strap and then he admitted it. I was sick all night. He had also charged groceries and used the money for candy. Then came a carnival or child's fair. I missed change constantly from my purse (which I leave around purposely), and one night this child didn't come home till 11 o'clock—a child of 11. We were all frantic and found he had been spending freely and enjoying himself. It was three weeks before he admitted taking my money.

Can't Resist Pantry

". . . The whole family seems to lack resistance around the pantry. I simply can't keep a cake or pie, and with so many I never get the culprit. And how I grieve over it. I am not sure of any of them. They'll all steal from the pantry, and I've even left a cake in the middle of the table and dared them to touch it. It would be touched all right and I'd never find out—not even a blush."

Then she states that the father often interferes when she checks on the stealing by those children "and says before them, "Well, didn't you steal cookies when you were their age?"

You and I cannot honestly question this mother's motives. Few, perhaps, are more conscientious than she is. Only the methods she employed would we challenge.

Like thousands of other conscientious mothers, she vainly puts her trust in the child's forced confession to make him true and honest. She would even expose her boys to temptations to steal when she well knew they could not withstand them, in orler, as she hoped, to exercise them in admitting their guilt.

Shift Her Methods

As kindly and sympathetically as I could, I write this mother, begging her to shift her methods and not only to cease to tempt her children but, on the contrary, to save them from as many temptations as possible. Temptations to which one falls always weaken one's will power. Only as one is able to resist victoriously in one strengthened for having been tempted.

Avoid Confession

I begged her, moreover, to quit trying to force her children to confess and to put them on the witness stand never again but, instead, to try to make each feel himself a worthy, well-loved member of the family whose name he wishes to enjoy and uphold.

What could I add about her husband except words of sympathy? She hardly can hope to change him much save by means very indirect.

WIFE PRESERVERS

Don't throw away old tablecloths. If there is enough goods left in a large cloth make lunch cloths out of it, discarding the worn parts. If there is not enough good material for that, make small napkins to be used for picnics, porch meals or sick room.

Okay Now, Montie

Louisville, Ky., (AP) — The writing profession stands corrected.

Montie Weaver, pitcher for the Louisville Colonels of the American Association, told a local newspaperman that sports writers had been misspelling his first name as "Monte" since he broke into baseball in 1923. He is a former major leaguer.

Domestic Comedy Is Offered at Garden

"He Married His Wife," now showing at the Garden, is a domestic comedy based on a hilarious idea: an ex-husband who wants to find a husband for his wife so he can stop paying heavy alimony but who balks when she turns down the colorless prospect he digs up for her in favor of a dashing, romantic Romeo.

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph.D

Dear Dr. Myers, " says a writer. "I have a very serious and grave problem before me in the matter of training my children. An ex-school teacher, a lover of children and of child-training, I have had very little difficulty with my family of eight bright, healthy boys and girls, all at school but one baby. My heart is breaking as I tell you I have found deceit and dishonesty in my family.

"I have never punished a child when he admitted truthfully a wrong-doing. I have so much emphasized the truth that this comes as an awful shock to me.

"Six years ago we had perhaps the best business in town, but lost it, and had to cut down in our living. The children were always fed, but perhaps they were hungry for the little extras we were used to. . ."

Then she tells of the neighbor who informed her that one of her boys had bought bananas and had them charged to this neighbor; that another neighbor woman reported another boy who took a bottle of pop from the kitchen as he was delivering a message. "He denied it before her, but she was so sure I took down a strap and then he admitted it. I was sick all night. He had also charged groceries and used the money for candy. Then came a carnival or child's fair. I missed change constantly from my purse (which I leave around purposely), and one night this child didn't come home till 11 o'clock—a child of 11. We were all frantic and found he had been spending freely and enjoying himself. It was three weeks before he admitted taking my money.

Can't Resist Pantry

". . . The whole family seems to lack resistance around the pantry. I simply can't keep a cake or pie, and with so many I never get the culprit. And how I grieve over it. I am not sure of any of them. They'll all steal from the pantry, and I've even left a cake in the middle of the table and dared them to touch it. It would be touched all right and I'd never find out—not even a blush."

Then she states that the father often interferes when she checks on the stealing by those children "and says before them, "Well, didn't you steal cookies when you were their age?"

You and I cannot honestly question this mother's motives. Few, perhaps, are more conscientious than she is. Only the methods she employed would we challenge.

Like thousands of other conscientious mothers, she vainly puts her trust in the child's forced confession to make him true and honest. She would even expose her boys to temptations to steal when she well knew they could not withstand them, in orler, as she hoped, to exercise them in admitting their guilt.

Shift Her Methods

As kindly and sympathetically as I could, I write this mother, begging her to shift her methods and not only to cease to tempt her children but, on the contrary, to save them from as many temptations as possible. Temptations to which one falls always weaken one's will power. Only as one is able to resist victoriously in one strengthened for having been tempted.

Avoid Confession

I begged her, moreover, to quit trying to force her children to confess and to put them on the witness stand never again but, instead, to try to make each feel himself a worthy, well-loved member of the family whose name he wishes to enjoy and uphold.

What could I add about her husband except words of sympathy? She hardly can hope to change him much save by means very indirect.

WIFE PRESERVERS

Don't throw away old tablecloths. If there is enough goods left in a large cloth make lunch cloths out of it, discarding the worn parts. If there is not enough good material for that, make small napkins to be used for picnics, porch meals or sick room.

Okay Now, Montie

Louisville, Ky., (AP) — The writing profession stands corrected.

Montie Weaver, pitcher for the Louisville Colonels of the American Association, told a local newspaperman that sports writers had been misspelling his first name as "Monte" since he broke into baseball in 1923. He is a former major leaguer.

Domestic Comedy Is Offered at Garden

"He Married His Wife," now showing at the Garden, is a domestic comedy based on a hilarious idea: an ex-husband who wants to find a husband for his wife so he can stop paying heavy alimony but who balks when she turns down the colorless prospect he digs up for her in favor of a dashing, romantic Romeo.

Today's GARDEN-GRAPH

By DEAN HALLIDAY

Get ready for the grape leaf hopper

If you are already anticipating a luscious crop from your grape vines this coming harvest season, then get ready to combat the grape leaf hopper, for it is the most common pest of grapevines. Unless checked, hoppers will cause great damage to grapevines from year to year. The hoppers winter over in the debris under the vines.

As shown in today's Garden-Graphs, these sucking insects are found feeding in the undersides of the grape leaves. Their presence is indicated by whitish spots on the upper leaf surface. As a result of the injury caused by the hoppers the grape leaves soon take on a mottled gray coloring, which is followed by browning and withering.

The young of the leaf hopper are wingless, although the adults develop wings. In color the leaf hoppers are a pale yellow with red markings, and are about one-eighth of an inch long.

To control grape leaf hoppers, spray the underside of the foliage with nicotine soap solution.

Value of Saying No Is Impressed For Engaged Girl

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX, Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage — Distributed by King Features Syndicate, Inc.

There are some men in this world who do not value a love so unselfish that there is no such word as "NO" in its vocabulary.

The girl who writes the following letter states the case much better that I or anyone else writing along the same lines could sum it up:

"I am coming to you for suggestions," she says, "as I am much troubled, and what have been through is undermining my health. I read your column daily, so I shall watch for your answer. I don't want you to write me personally, because the family might see the letter.

"I've been going with a man for the past four years. I was devoted to him and in that time I must say he has never hurt my feelings. I've been absolutely true to him, and during those four years I never accepted any attention from any other man. I even dropped my girl friends because he expected my exclusive companionship.

Heeded All Requests

"Whatever he suggested for me to do I always did, to please him. He didn't want me to spend any money on presents, for he said it was a waste of money. He didn't think I should buy expensive, or even good-looking clothes, and I agreed just to please him. My whole life was planned not to give him a moment's displeasure.

"He had a terribly hard job and as he is the oldest of his family and they needed his help very much, I urged him to give them more of his pay, and I even chipped in and gave him part of my pay envelope, for I lived at home and Mom was very liberal about me keeping most of mine. I was willing to wait years for him until he could afford to marry. I loved him so much.

Not His Type

Deep down in my heart I knew I was doing wrong when I gave in to his pleading that an engagement is as binding as marriage, but I'm just a one-man girl, and I believed everything he told me. After that he began going with another girl, and he has told me that he doesn't want to see me any more. I asked him why, and he said I was not his type of woman.

"I asked him what he meant and why he thinks he loves this other girl more than me. The inference is that I gave myself to him and she did not believe in that.

"What shall I do? It's so hard for me after four years, to gather up the broken pieces of my life and go on. I can't get him out of my mind. I would do anything to get him back."

You'll have to force yourself to get this man out of your mind and take an interest in everything which will help you to forget. He belongs to the "gimme" type, and from your own account of him he is nothing but a monument of selfishness and egoism. If you married him, you'd probably spend the rest of your life wondering why you ever did it.

Speaks for Itself

That fact that he was willing to take money from a girl speaks for itself. The name for men of that type isn't a pretty one. He wanted

Today's GARDEN-GRAPH

By DEAN HALLIDAY

Get ready for the grape leaf hopper

If you are already anticipating a luscious crop from your grape vines this coming harvest season, then get ready to combat the grape leaf hopper, for it is the most common pest of grapevines. Unless checked, hoppers will cause great damage to grapevines from year to year. The hoppers winter over in the debris under the vines.

As shown in today's Garden-Graphs, these sucking insects are found feeding in the undersides of the grape leaves. Their presence is indicated by whitish spots on the upper leaf surface. As a result of the injury caused by the hoppers the grape leaves soon take on a mottled gray coloring, which is followed by browning and withering.

The young of the leaf hopper are wingless, although the adults develop wings. In color the leaf hoppers are a pale yellow with red markings, and are about one-eighth of an inch long.

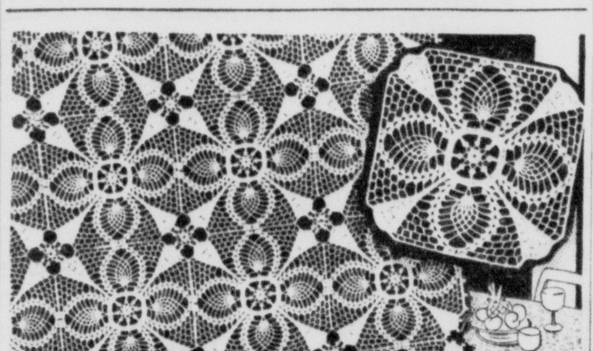

To control grape leaf hoppers, spray the underside of the foliage with nicotine soap solution.

Heeded All Requests

"Whatever he suggested for me to do I always did, to please him. He didn't want me to spend any money on presents, for he said it was a waste of money. He didn't think I should buy expensive, or even good-looking clothes, and I agreed just to please him. My whole life was planned not to give him a moment's displeasure.

"He had a terribly hard job and as he is the oldest of his family and they needed his help very much. I urged him to give them more of his pay, and I even chipped in and gave him part of my pay envelope, for I lived at home and Mom was very liberal about me keeping most of mine. I was willing to wait years for him, until he could afford to marry. I loved him so much.

Not His Type

Deep down in my heart I knew I was doing wrong when I gave in to his pleading that an engagement is as binding as marriage, but I'm just a one-man girl, and I believed everything he told me. After that he began going with another girl, and he has told me that he doesn't want to see me any more. I asked him why, and he said I was not his type of woman.

"I asked him what he meant and why he thinks he loves this other girl more than me. The inference is that I gave myself to him and she did not believe in that.

"What shall I do? It's so hard for me, after four years, to gather up the broken pieces of my life and go on. I can't get him out of my mind. I would do anything to get him back."

You'll have to force yourself to get this man out of your mind and take an interest in everything which will help you to forget. He belongs to the "gimme" type, and from your own account of him he is nothing but a monument of selfishness and egoism. If you married him, you'd probably spend the rest of your life wondering why you ever did it.

Speaks for Itself

That fact that he was willing to take money from a girl speaks for itself. The name for men of that type isn't a pretty one. He wanted

Selected Issues Advance in Brisk Rally of Stock Market Near Close

Earnings Statements Provide incentive for Last-Minute Rally

By FREDERICK GARDNER

New York, May 7 (AP) — Buyers bid selected issues in a last-minute revival of bullishness in today's stock market after idling during the greater part of the proceedings.

Traders became a bit more optimistic near the close, however, as earnings statements continued highly favorable, with business items more constructive than otherwise.

Prominent forward movers included Bethlehem Steel, U. S. Rubber preferred, Montgomery Ward, United Aircraft, Eastern Air Lines, American Airlines, Westinghouse, Atlantic Refining and Celanese.

Up as much as two in the Curb were Todd Shipyards, Pennsylvania-Central Airlines, Gulf Oil and American Gas. Backward were Aluminum of America, American Cyanamid "B" and Aviation & Transportation. The turnover here was around 150,000 shares.

Moose Band Will Play At Strand Theater

The Loyal Order of Moose Band under the direction of A. R. Serf with Ralph Baird as drum major will give two short concerts at the Strand this evening in addition to the regular program. Jack Benny in "Buck Benny Rides Again." This will be the bands' first appearance in their new uniforms. The personnel of the band is as follows:

Trombones — Jack Vernall, Robert Crone, J. G. Humbertson, and P. Stengle.

Basses—A. A. Fair and Edward Roberts.

Baritones—Harry Poling and Arnold DePollo.

Clarinets — Theodore Clark, Frank Green, Freddie Williams, C. Wolfe and Joe Brown.

Drums—Charles McCullough, S. J. Clark and Robert Binnix.

Leighton Noble and his orchestra come to the Strand tomorrow. Featuring Edith Cadwell, charming songstress; Chick Floyd at the piano, and the Noble Trio, this versatile dance ensemble will offer rhythmic dance melodies.

Noble's success is said to be due in large measure to his pleasing voice and talented piano playing, which originally launched him on a musical career. His personality and charm have made a favorable impression in New England as well as in Hollywood, where he appeared in several pictures.

On the screen will be Heather Angel and John King in Universal's comedy "Half a Sinner."

Embassy Film Features Oberon and Cooper

Merle Oberon steals the affections of strong, silent Gary Cooper in "The Cowboy and the Lady," a comedy romance, scheduled for its first showing at the Embassy theater today.

The picture introduces Merle as the romantic, outdoor type personified by Cooper. She plays the part of an unconventional society debutante, the daughter of a senator with presidential aspirations, and the role gives her a chance to be gay, charming, witty and the young person she is. Merle runs out of the Social Register into the cowboy life of Gary, and it's after wedding bells have climaxed the romance that things begin to happen in fun-provoking fashion.

Hayward Is Starred In Small Production

Louis Hayward is starred as Oliver Essex in "My Son, My Son!" the Edward Small production for United Artists release, which will open at the Maryland theater tomorrow.

Close friends of Hayward had warned him against playing the role of Oliver Essex in "My Son, My Son!" because that part is anything but a sympathetic one. It is the character of a boy who grows to manhood as a liar and a cheat, despite the constant showering of love, affection and worldly trappings by a doting father, who cannot see that he is spoiling the lad. It all ends up when Oliver falls in love with his own father's sweetheart.

Hersholt Is Star Of New Picture

"Meet Doctor Christian," the first in a projected new series of films starring Jean Hersholt, and based on the famous "Doctor Christian" radio aerial, comes to the New Liberty theater tomorrow with an outstanding cast featuring Dorothy Lovett, Robert Baldwin, Enid Bennett and Paul Harvey.

The new film drama concerns the humanitarian ideals of a small town doctor and the obstacles he encounters when trying to benefit his fellow citizens.

Miss Lovett, a newcomer to motion pictures, plays the role of Judy Price, Dr. Christian's nurse, a character that millions of radio fans will remember. The masculine romantic interest is supplied by Robert Baldwin.

The efforts of Dr. Christian to get a much-needed hospital for the town of River's End, and his struggle to arouse the town to its real necessities are said to provide heart-warming entertainment, and also to find their counterpart in real-life happenings in rural America.

Patsy Lee Parsons, eight years of age, and also a new face to the screen, is reported to make an impressive debut in an important role in the film. Following completion of "Meet Dr. Christian," she was signed to a long term contract, holding high hopes for her filmdom future.

This first "Doctor Christian" picture has been tailored to a pattern set by thousands of fans, who have requested Mr. Hersholt to bring his popular character to the screen.

STARS IN "MY SON, MY SON"

Brian Aherne, Madeleine Carroll and Louis Hayward in a scene from Edward Small's "My Son, My Son" opening tomorrow at the Maryland Theater. The film is taken from the best selling novel by Howard Spring.

Edith Caldwell the famous singer with Leighton Noble and his orchestra which comes to the Strand Thursday for one day only.

CRAZED BY PILES?
Here's What to Do for Pain and Itching of Simple Piles!

Simple Piles can almost drive you crazy with their itching and their soreness. They can make your nights a horror and your days a torture.

Here's what to do for the distress of simple Piles — the maddening itching and the scratching pain. Apply amazing Pazo Ointment. Pazo really works. It really relieves the itching; really relieves the pain and soreness.

Here's why Pazo works. Here's why it gets results. First, it soothes the sore and inflamed parts. That relieves the itching and the pain. Second, Pazo lubricates the affected parts. That softens the hardened and dried parts and helps prevent cracking and soreness. Third, it has an astringent action that tends to reduce the swollen parts and, in many cases, check bleeding.

Try Pazo and see the results you get. Note the relief from the itching and pain. If Pazo does not give you satisfactory relief, see a doctor as your condition may be such as to require a physician's services. Get Pazo Ointment at any druggist at small cost. (It also comes in suppository form for those who prefer.)

Selected Issues Advance in Brisk Rally of Stock Market Near Close

Earnings Statements Provide incentive for Last-Minute Rally

By FREDERICK GARDNER

New York, May 7 (AP) — Buyers bid selected issues in a last-minute revival of bullishness in today's stock market after idling during the greater part of the proceedings.

Traders became a bit more optimistic near the close, however, as earnings statements continued highly favorable, with business items more constructive than otherwise.

Prominent forward movers included Bethlehem Steel, U. S. Rubber preferred, Montgomery Ward, United Aircraft, Eastern Air Lines, American Airlines, Westinghouse, Atlantic Refining and Celanese.

Up as much as two in the Curb were Todd Shipyards, Pennsylvania-Central Airlines, Gulf Oil and American Gas. Backward were Aluminum of America, American Cyanamid "B" and Aviation & Transportation. The turnover here was around 150,000 shares.

Moose Band Will Play At Strand Theater

The Loyal Order of Moose Band under the direction of A. R. Serf with Ralph Baird as drum major will give two short concerts at the Strand this evening in addition to the regular program. Jack Benny in "Buck Benny Rides Again." This will be the bands' first appearance in their new uniforms. The personnel of the band is as follows:

Trombones — Jack Vernall, Robert Crone, J. G. Humbertson, and P. Stengle.

Basses—A. A. Fair and Edward Roberts.

Baritones—Harry Poling and Arnold DePollo.

Clarinets — Theodore Clark, Frank Green, Freddie Williams, C. Wolfe and Joe Brown.

Drums—Charles McCullough, S. J. Clark and Robert Binnix.

Leighton Noble and his orchestra come to the Strand tomorrow. Featuring Edith Cadwell, charming songstress; Chick Floyd at the piano, and the Noble Trio, this versatile dance ensemble will offer rhythmic dance melodies.

Noble's success is said to be due in large measure to his pleasing voice and talented piano playing, which originally launched him on a musical career. His personality and charm have made a favorable impression in New England as well as in Hollywood, where he appeared in several pictures.

On the screen will be Heather Angel and John King in Universal's comedy "Half a Sinner."

Embassy Film Features Oberon and Cooper

Merle Oberon steals the affections of strong, silent Gary Cooper in "The Cowboy and the Lady," a comedy romance, scheduled for its first showing at the Embassy theater today.

The picture introduces Merle as the romantic, outdoor type personified by Cooper. She plays the part of an unconventional society debutante, the daughter of a senator with presidential aspirations, and the role gives her a chance to be gay, charming, witty and the young person she is. Merle runs out of the Social Register into the cowboy life of Gary, and it's after wedding bells have climaxed the romance that things begin to happen in fun-provoking fashion.

The supporting cast includes Patsy Kelly, Walter Brennan, Fuzzy Knight, Mabel Todd and Henry Kolker.

Hayward Is Starred In Small Production

Louis Hayward is starred as Oliver Essex in "My Son, My Son!" the Edward Small production for United Artists release, which will open at the Maryland theater tomorrow.

Close friends of Hayward had warned him against playing the role of Oliver Essex in "My Son, My Son!" because that part is anything but a sympathetic one. It is the character of a boy who grows to manhood as a liar and a cheat, despite the constant showering of love, affection and worldly trappings by a doting father, who cannot see that he is spoiling the lad. It all ends up when Oliver falls in love with his own father's sweetheart.

Hershott Is Star Of New Picture

"Meet Doctor Christian," the first in a projected new series of films starring Jean Hersholt, and based on the famous "Doctor Christian" radio aerial, comes to the New Liberty theater tomorrow with an outstanding cast featuring Dorothy Lovett, Robert Baldwin, Enid Bennett and Paul Harvey.

The new film drama concerns the humanitarian ideals of a small town doctor and the obstacles he encounters when trying to benefit his fellow citizens.

Miss Lovett, a newcomer to motion pictures, plays the role of Judy Price, Dr. Christian's nurse, a character that millions of radio fans will remember. The masculine romantic interest is supplied by Robert Baldwin.

The efforts of Dr. Christian to get a much-needed hospital for the town of River's End, and his struggle to arouse the town to its real necessities are said to provide heart-warming entertainment, and also to find their counterpart in real-life happenings in rural America.

Patsy Lee Parsons, eight years of age, and also a new face to the screen, is reported to make an impressive debut in an important role in the film. Following completion of "Meet Dr. Christian," she was signed to a long term contract holding high hopes for her filmdom future.

This first "Doctor Christian" picture has been tailored to a pattern set by thousands of fans, who have requested Mr. Hersholt to bring his popular character to the screen.

STARS IN "MY SON, MY SON"

Brian Aherne, Madeleine Carroll and Louis Hayward in a scene from Edward Small's "My Son, My Son" opening tomorrow at the Maryland Theater. The film is taken from the best selling novel by Howard Spring.

WITH NOBLE'S BAND

EDITH CALDWELL

CRAZED BY PILES?
Here's What to Do for Pain and Itching of Simple Piles!

Simple Piles can almost drive you crazy with their itching and their soreness. They can make your nights a horror and your days a torture.

Here's what to do for the distress of simple Piles — the maddening itching and the wracking pain. Apply amazing Pazo Ointment. Pazo really works. It really relieves the itching; really relieves the pain and soreness.

Here's why Pazo works. Here's why it gets results. First, it soothes the sore and inflamed parts. That relieves the itching and the pain. Second, Pazo lubricates the affected parts. That softens the hardened and dried parts and helps prevent cracking and soreness. Third, it has an astringent action that tends to reduce the swollen parts and, in many cases, check bleeding.

Try Pazo and see the results you get. Note the relief from the itching and pain. If Pazo does not give you satisfactory relief, see a doctor as your condition may be such as to require a physician's services.

Get Pazo Ointment at any drugstore at small cost. (It also comes in suppository form for those who prefer.)

Are Latins Lousy Lovers? Let's Settle the Argument

Elena Edith Mildred

By SIGRID ARNE
AP Feature Service Writer

Washington — Here's the truth about that business, "Latins Are Lousy Lovers." From three young ladies who should know—because they have sampled both sides of the border.

Their father is Panama's Ambassador to the United States: Don Jorge E. Boyd. Their mother is a Bolling of Virginia. Their great-aunt is Mrs. Woodrow Wilson.

The three girls are Edith, Mildred and Elena Boyd. They're all 18, because they're triplets. They've gone to school both in Washington and Panama City. They've been chaperoned Spanish style and gone on "blind dates" American style.

They're very pretty. Tall, thin, bright brown eyes, curling brown hair, dainty laughs. They dance, sing (harmonize), play the guitar, swim and play tennis.

On both sides of the border their social secretary is kept in a dither by their list of dates. So their unofficial investigation into dating is not to be overlooked.

Latins are better for girls who like gay, witty escorts.

Latins dance better.

But—

Americans are better for girls who like serious men.

Americans can tell such funny stories. They use such surprising phrases.

Americans can be so interesting when they're serious. Particularly the older ones (that's 27 for the Boyds).

It's purely an academic argument with the Ambassador's daughters. Because they're headed for Hollywood and not for the altar. They're studying music, dancing, the guitar, and voice here—and Hollywood has nibbled.

Candidates Busy In West Virginia

(By The Associated Press)

Parkersburg's ears were full of politics Monday night — there were seven Republicans on hand for one meeting and the two major candidates of the "federal" faction of the Democrats for another.

It was a scene which probably will be reenacted in other West Virginia cities during the seven days remaining until the May 14 primary.

About the only major candidate who did not see action Monday was Major D. Boone Dawson, of Charleston, Republican aspirant for governor who is booked solid for the rest of the week.

While organizations marshalled for the business of getting out the vote, one of the chief supporters of the "federal" wing, Van A. Bittner, took the stump on behalf of Senator M. M. Neely, who seeks the Democratic Gubernatorial nomination, and Judge Harley M. Kilgore, a Senatorial Candidate.

Bittner, president of United Mine Workers District 17 and a high official of the CIO, spoke at Williamson. Kilgore and Neely were at Parkersburg.

At Charleston, Neely's opponent, State Chairman R. Carl Andrews came out for liberalization of relief regulations and for unemployment compensation changes — mainly abandonment of the three-week waiting period for benefits and lengthening the benefit period from fourteen to sixteen weeks.

Neely spoke out again against the administrations of former governor H. G. Kump and Governor Homer A. Holt, declaring they had worked against organized labor.

The four Republican Senatorial candidates and the three candidates for the party's Fourth District Congressional nomination were guests at the other Parkersburg meeting.

(AP) Feature Service

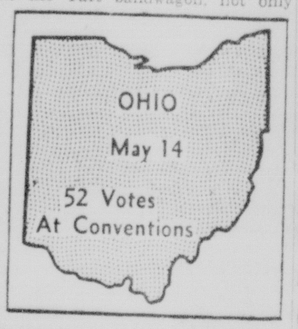

Columbus, O.—Ohio's 52 coveted votes in the national conventions—a prize for any presidential aspirant—are sewed up for President Roosevelt and Senator Robert A. Taft.

Sen. Taft

If Mr. Roosevelt wants renomination Ohio's Democratic delegates will vote for him. They'll go to Chicago with favorite son Charles Sawyer, national committeeman, as first choice, but that's just to meet a state requirement, since the President's name is not entered. Sawyer is a third-term advocate and controlling committees committed the delegation to Mr. Roosevelt.

Republican delegates are perched on the Taft bandwagon, not only because he's a favorite son but also because he's a leading national candidate. He's the lone contender of either party in the state's presidential preference race. Taft got into it mainly to keep out other candidates, although the results are nonbinding on delegates.

Thus, with no delegate contests or presidential popularity tests, national aspects of Ohio's May 14 primary are cut and dried before the first ballot—something new in this traditional political battleground.

Charles Sawyer

Outside candidates often have tested their political wings on the currents of Ohio balloting. But this year organization plans to back Roosevelt, and Taft apparently discouraged other contenders.

Republican friends of Gov. John W. Bricker are set to launch a presidential boom for him if the leading candidates deadlock. He is assured a second-term nomination without opposition, but on the Democratic gubernatorial front there are seven candidates. Five candidates want the U. S. Senate seat of Vic Donahey, who is retiring.

Nothing Smells New Under the Sun

Hagerstown, Md., (AP) — "Stink bombs are not new.

Practical jokesters make them today from chemicals. A century ago they used herbs, or simply tossed pepper on a hot stove.

Hagerstown boys broke up so many public meetings that way that an indignant City Council passed an ordinance in 1859 levying a fine of $1 to $10 on pepper or bomb tossers.

'Phone Snooping Is The Norm in Vienna

Vienna (AP) — In Vienna, if you telephone to your choicest enemy to insult him, you may be sued for defaming his character in public.

In a test case, a judge held there is nothing private about an Austrian telephone.

The possibility of a jumbled - up connection which would enable all the neighbors to listen to any disparaging comment must be taken into consideration, said the judge in holding that all telephone conversations must be regarded public.

To Check Constipation Get at Its Cause!

If constipation has you down so you feel heavy, tired and dopey, it's time you did something about it. And something more than just taking a physic! You should get at the cause of the trouble.

If you eat the super-refined food most people eat, the chances are the difficulty is simple—you don't get enough "bulk." And "bulk" doesn't mean heavy food. It's a kind of food that isn't consumed in the body, but leaves a soft "bulky" mass in the intestines.

If this common form of constipation is your trouble, eat Kellogg's All-Bran regularly, and drink plenty of water. All-Bran isn't a medicine—it's a crunchy, toasted cereal. And it will help you not only to get regular but to keep regular. Made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek. If your condition is chronic, it is wise to consult a physician.

Doctor Writes Of Reactions Of Stomach

Temperature in Abdomen and the Intestines Is Discussed

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

What effects do cold or hot drinks have upon the stomach, and on the process of digestion?

In the older physiologies it used to be said that the stomach quickly reduced both hot and cold drinks to its own temperature. This did not seem very reasonable—there being no real thermodynamic mechanism in the stomach to change the temperature of its contents any faster than if they were outside the body—and the researches of Drs. Hepburn, Eberhardt and their associates put the matter on a much more understandable basis.

The temperature of the digestive tract rises the further down one goes. The stomach is one degree warmer than the mouth, the large intestine two degrees warmer than the stomach.

Ice water or ice cream causes a marked lowering of stomach temperature. The recovery time is over half an hour. Ice water with a meal delays the emptying time of the stomach from fifteen to thirty minutes. When a cold beverage leaks out of the stomach into the intestines, it lowers the intestinal temperature and movements. This may explain some digestive disturbances in individuals who have a rapid emptying rate of the stomach and who partake copiously of cold beverages.

Emergency Treatment

What is the emergency treatment of broken nose?

The first thought in case of a severe jolt on the nose is for hemorrhage. Bleeding from the nose after such an injury may be serious or even fatal.

The nose must be plugged up, preferably with sterile cotton plugs; if not, with any kind of cotton plugs or soft linen. These plugs do not harm. In fact, they do good because they act as splints if the central bone of the nose is broken.

When they are removed, the old clots may be gently washed out with salt solution; if bleeding continues the nose is plugged up with sterile cotton plugs moistened with epinephrine. If there is not much bleeding before swelling has occurred, the surgeon may see fit to attempt to put the broken bones and cartilage back in place. This, however, should not be attempted by anyone except a surgeon.

Is it true that color sense can be developed if the training is begun at a sufficiently early period in life?

No. A really color-blind person is color-blind from birth and has become habituated to his visual world long before there is any possibility of training him.

According to Duke-Elder's Text book of Eye Diseases, "A person in whom color vision is defective may go through life quite unconscious of his inferiority and without making any incriminating mistakes, differentiating objects by their size, shape and luminosity, using all the time a complete color vocabulary based on his experience, which teaches him that color terms are applied with great consistency to certain objects and to certain achromatic shades, until circumstances are arranged to eliminate these accessory aids, and he realizes that his sensations differ in some way from the normal."

Questions and Answers

K. B.: "Is it not true that there is a vast distinction between insanity and mental ill health? My impression is that a person may be moody, unstable or neurotic without there being any implication of insanity, and that there is no stigma attached to consulting reliable psychiatric advice concerning personality and behavior problems."

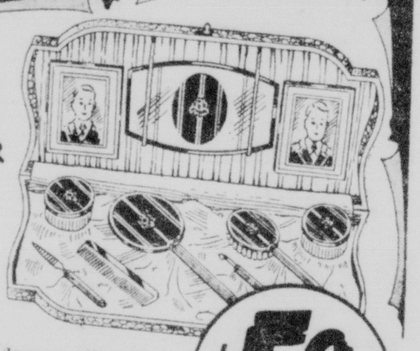

Answer—I think you have made a true statement of the case. Certainly psychiatrists deal with personality problems in those who could not be called insane. There is, however, no stigma attached to consulting a psychiatrist about insanity.

Mineral Industries Will Be Erected On West Virginia University Campus

$650,000 Allocated by Board of Public Works for New Structure

Charleston, W. Va., May 7 (AP)—A $650,000 allocation to build the long-hoped-for mineral industries building at West Virginia University and a physical education building at West Virginia State College was announced today by the Board of Public Works.

The $500,000 for the structure at Morgantown and the $150,000 for the Negro gymnasium at Institute came from the $3,000,000 conditional budget which the 1939 legislature approved, contingent upon availability of revenue.

The sums brought to $1,400,000 the amount released from the conditional budget, and the board said today's actions "have been brought about by the increase in tax collections due to the business upturn."

Research Facilities

A spokesman characterized the mineral industries building as an eventual establishment "to furnish all of the natural resources of West Virginia and the allied industries with research facilities second to none in the nation."

The structure would house, among other things, the University School of Mines, Chemical Engineering Department, Geological Courses, Ceramics courses and other university divisions.

On the top floor will be the State Geological Survey, and in the basement of the five-story building a model coal mine will be installed for practical work.

The building will be located on the I. C. White property, fronting Willey street, and will be ready for occupancy sometime next year.

Tentative plans at institute call for a large gymnasium with a spectator-seating capacity of about 2,000, possibly a swimming pool, smaller gymnasiums and game rooms, and the usual locker and shower rooms. It will be situated at the opposite end of the campus from the administration building.

Sullivan Expresses Thanks

Secretary Jesse V. Sullivan of the West Virginia Coal Association was one of the first to come forward with "thanks" for the mineral industries building.

"It means the inauguration of a plan of practical research in West Virginia which shall redound to the benefit of the people of the state through the discovery of hidden wealth in our natural resources."

The conditional budget listed $750,000 as the amount for the mineral industries proposal and $250,000 for the institute gymnasium.

The board did not comment on the reduced figures.

Previous allocations from the conditional listing provided a new unit at Weston State Hospital, a new wing for the Huttonsville Prison Farm and funds for the launching of prison industries at the State Penitentiary at Moundsville.

The dark-skinned girl, mother of a three-year-old boy and expecting another child this summer, was accused of shooting her husband at their Silver Hill home, sixteen miles from this county seat, because he stayed from home overnight.

Mrs. Long is free on bond and the date of her trial was not set immediately.

She refused to testify at a preliminary hearing but Sheriff Frank Berger quoted her as saying she did not know the gun was loaded when she aimed it at her husband and pulled the trigger.

The slaying occurred at the height of one of the worst snowstorms this section has experienced and Berger was forced to make the trip to the Long home in a snow plow and on horseback through drifts twelve feet deep to take her into custody.

Twenty-Two Percent of Republicans Vote in Garrett County

Fifty Percent Of Democrats at Polls in Primary

Democratic Vote Result of Bitter Bruce-Radcliffe Fight

Oakland, May 7.—With all twenty-five voting places in the county having reported the returns on Monday's primary, the results show about 25 percent more activity on the part of the Democrats, as a result of the factional struggle between Radcliffe and Bruce.

Bruce carried Garrett county 902 to 801, with Gierttoski getting 8 votes. There are 3046 registered Democrats and the vote showed that about fifty percent were out to the polls. The Republicans showed less interest, only about 22 percent of the 3744 registered voters getting out. Nevertheless they gave Dewey a vote of 1179 with only 183 for an uninstructed delegation and former Governor Harry Nice had a commanding lead over Broening 1160 to 399.

In the Congressional race for Republican nomination A. Charles Stewart carried this county by 150 votes, receiving 755 to 605 for Walter P. Johnson. Kimble polled 179 and Long 34, to complete the balloting.

Andrews Lists Expenses of $7,325.76

Charleston, W. Va., May 7 (AP)—State Chairman R. Carl Andrews listed expenditures of $7,325.76 today in his race for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination.

Andrews, one of the candidates filing on the last day which pre-primary expenses must be reported to the secretary of state, said he received $100 contributions from Charles G. Peters, B. K. Given and Herman Bennett, $300 from Tax Commissioner Ernest K. James and $500 from State Senator S. H. Robertson of Clendenin.

Most of Andrews' expense was for printing, newspaper advertisements and office help.

It was the largest expense account reported by a member of either party so far.

Elmer A. Jones of Charleston, who withdrew from the Democratic gubernatorial contest last week, said he spent $2,652.15 before bowing out. Contributions of $619.25 were listed.

One of the Republican gubernatorial candidates, State Senator D. E. Early of Moundsville, reported expenses of $15.

Judge Marley M. Kilgore, running for the Democratic Senatorial nomination, spent $223.57 so far and former Governor E. F. Morgan, seeking the same post on the Republican ticket, $665.

CIO Threatens To Bolt Democratic Party in W. Va.

Bittner Declares He Would Not Vote for Kump or Andrews in Nov.

Charleston, W. Va., May 7 (AP)—The West Virginia primary campaign came into its last week today with the CIO coupling a threat of a Democratic party bolt with more accusations aimed at the statehouse faction and statehouse speakers, firmly declaring organized labor has nothing to fear from their man.

The labor issue, definitely a part of the most vigorously fought Democratic campaign in years, came to the surface again in several quarters.

Van A. Bittner, president of United Mine Workers District 17, asserted that should next Tuesday's primary see the nomination of former Governor H. G. Kump and Democratic State Chairman R. Carl Andrews "I will not vote for either nor will I ask my people to do so."

Senator M. M. Neely, candidate of the CIO-Federal faction forces for the nomination for governor, said in a recent speech at Logan the party was threatened with a labor bolt.

On the other hand, H. L. Snyder, Jr., of Charleston, going on the air in behalf of Andrews reiterated the statehouse claim that Neely never would have entered the campaign "except for the insistence" of CIO Chieftain John L. Lewis. This claim Neely has vehemently denied.

Snyder added:

"Organized labor has nothing to fear from the candidacy of Carl Andrews. The labor record of the Democratic party of the past seven years shows that the Democratic legislature enacted statute after statute designed to help the laboring man."

Bittner sent letters to Governor Homer A. Holt and Attorney General Clarence W. Meadows, charging that D. Homer Stephenson and Andrews, Stephenson's son-in-law, during their combined terms as sheriffs of Kanawha county "made the enormous amount of $292,107.31 net profit from the amount of money appropriated by the government for feeding prisoners in Kanawha county."

Circuit Court Meets In Queen Anne's

Centreville, Md., May 7. (AP)—The Queen Anne's county grand jury opened its May term deliberations today, after hearing Circuit Judge Thomas J. Keating cite a "healthy condition"—in respect to the crime situation—in the county.

Judge Keating said the community had been relatively free of law violations of a serious nature, but mentioned three laws which he said always should be brought to the attention of juries. These were the Defaulters' act, and abortion act and the law relating to the illegal handling and use of narcotics.

A feature of today's post-court session was the presentation by the Jeff Davis Post, American Legion, of two flags, an American flag and a Maryland flag, to the court.

The presentation was made by Thomas J. Keating, Jr., a member of the bar and of the legion, and accepted by his father, Judge Keating, for the court.

Governor Holt Charges W.P.A. Men Got Threats

Says They Are Being Strongly Pressured To Vote for M. M. Neely

Charleston, W. Va., May 7 (AP) —Governor Holt told state WPA Administrator J. N. Alderson in a letter today that "the political activities of the WPA in West Virginia are now and have been for several years well known to all informed persons."

Holt's letter was in reply to one written by Alderson at Huntington, characterizing statements made by Holt in handbills sent to WPA workers as "deliberately vicious."

The governor said he caused the handbills to be printed because of reports that WPA employes "were being strongly pressured and threatened with discharge" unless they voted for Senator M. M. Neely, gubernatorial candidate of the Democratic party's federal faction.

Holt told Alderson that he was "confident of your good intentions in this matter" but "you are, unfortunately, at the head of an organization which looks to people other than you for its principal instructions."

"The only additional suggestion that I can make," Holt added "is that you do not close your eyes to what is going on around you. The political activities of the WPA in West Virginia are now and have been for several years well known to all informed persons."

Alderson, in his letter, asserted that "it is absolutely astounding to me that a governor of this great state would so corrupt his high office as to issue a bulletin of innuendo, half-truths and deliberate misrepresentations."

Holt in saying he did not blame the administrator for the situation he claimed exists, asserted that as he had previously said the WPA "was set up" by Van A. Bittner and William Blizzard, United Mine Workers officials, and "some other appointees of John L. Lewis."

New Deal Waste Hit by Rush Holt

Fairmont, W. Va., May 7 (AP) —A supporter of social security legislation, Senator Rush D. Holt declared tonight that "I do not feel it has gone nearly far enough."

The youthful Weston Democrat, campaigning for re-election, declared in an address prepared for delivery by radio:

"People do not want the $10 and $12-a-month old age pensions. They do not want red tape that require a person to sign a pauper's oath before he can get assistance. There is far too much red tape in the administrative procedure in the distribution of relief."

Holt, declaring he had called for the "elimination of waste and extravagance in governmental expenditures," asserted:

"I did not think it was necessary for the government to have a survey to determine whether fishing worms like music, neither is it important for the tax payers to have a bulletin on the love life of the bull frog. All this money came from one place, the people."

He spoke later at a Wheeling rally.

Twenty-Two Percent of Republicans Vote in Garrett County

Fifty Percent Of Democrats at Polls in Primary

Democratic Vote Result of Bitter Bruce-Radcliffe Fight

Oakland, May 7.—With all twenty-five voting places in the county having reported the returns on Monday's primary, the results show about 25 percent more activity on the part of the Democrats, as a result of the factional struggle between Radcliffe and Bruce.

Bruce carried Garrett county 902 to 801, with Gierttoski getting 8 votes. There are 3046 registered Democrats and the vote showed that about fifty percent were out to the polls. The Republicans showed less interest, only about 22 percent of the 5744 registered voters getting out. Nevertheless they gave Dewey a vote of 1179 with only 183 for an uninstructed delegation and former Governor Harry Nice had a commanding lead over Broening 1160 to 399.

In the Congressional race for Republican nomination A. Charles Stewart carried this county by 150 votes, receiving 755 to 605 for Walter P. Johnson. Kimble polled 179 and Long 34, to complete the balloting.

Andrews Lists Expenses of $7,325.76

Charleston, W. Va., May 7 (AP)—State Chairman R. Carl Andrews listed expenditures of $7,325.76 today in his race for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination.

Andrews, one of the candidates filing on the last day which pre-primary expenses must be reported to the secretary of state, said he received $100 contributions from Charles G. Peters, B. K. Given and Herman Bennett, $300 from Tax Commissioner Ernest K. James and $500 from State Senator S. H. Robertson of Clendenin.

Most of Andrews' expense was for printing, newspaper advertisements and office help.

It was the largest expense account reported by a member of either party so far.

Elmer A. Jones of Charleston, who withdrew from the Democratic gubernatorial contest last week, said he spent $2,652.15 before bowing out. Contributions of $619.25 were listed.

One of the Republican gubernatorial candidates, State Senator D. E. Early of Moundsville, reported expenses of $15.

Judge Marley M. Kilgore, running for the Democratic Senatorial nomination, spent $223.57 so far and former Governor E. F. Morgan, seeking the same post on the Republican ticket, $665.

CIO Threatens To Bolt Democratic Party in W. Va.

Bittner Declares He Would Not Vote for Kump or Andrews in Nov.

Charleston, W. Va., May 7 (AP)—The West Virginia primary campaign came into its last week today with the CIO coupling a threat of a Democratic party bolt with more accusations aimed at the statehouse faction and statehouse speakers, firmly declaring organized labor has nothing to fear from their man.

The labor issue, definitely a part of the most vigorously fought Democratic campaign in years, came to the surface again in several quarters.

Van A. Bittner, president of United Mine Workers District 17, asserted that should next Tuesday's primary see the nomination of former Governor H. G. Kump and Democratic State Chairman R. Carl Andrews "I will not vote for either nor will I ask my people to do so."

Senator M. M. Neely, candidate of the CIO-Federal faction forces for the nomination for governor, said in a recent speech at Logan the party was threatened with a labor bolt.

On the other hand, H. L. Snyder, Jr., of Charleston, going on the air in behalf of Andrews reiterated the statehouse claim that Neely never would have entered the campaign "except for the insistence" of CIO Chieftain John L. Lewis. This claim Neely has vehemently denied.

Snyder added:

"Organized labor has nothing to fear from the candidacy of Carl Andrews. The labor record of the Democratic party of the past seven years shows that the Democratic legislature enacted statute after statute designed to help the laboring man."

Bittner sent letters to Governor Homer A. Holt and Attorney General Clarence W. Meadows, charging that D. Homer Stephenson and Andrews, Stephenson's son-in-law, during their combined terms as sheriffs of Kanawha county "made the enormous amount of $292,107.31 net profit from the amount of money appropriated by the government for feeding prisoners in Kanawha county."

Circuit Court Meets In Queen Anne's

Centreville, Md., May 7. (AP)—The Queen Anne's county grand jury opened its May term deliberations today, after hearing Circuit Judge Thomas J. Keating cite a "healthy condition"—in respect to the crime situation—in the county.

Judge Keating said the community had been relatively free of law violations of a serious nature, but mentioned three laws which he said always should be brought to the attention of juries. These were the Defaulters' act, and abortion act and the law relating to the illegal handling and use of narcotics.

A feature of today's post-court session was the presentation by the Jeff Davis Post, American Legion, of two flags, an American flag and a Maryland flag, to the court.

The presentation was made by Thomas J. Keating, Jr., a member of the bar and of the legion, and accepted by his father, Judge Keating, for the court.

Governor Holt Charges W.P.A. Men Got Threats

Says They Are Being Strongly Pressured To Vote for M. M. Neely

Charleston, W. Va., May 7 (AP)—Governor Holt told state WPA Administrator J. N. Alderson in a letter today that "the political activities of the WPA in West Virginia are now and have been for several years well known to all informed persons."

Holt's letter was in reply to one written by Alderson at Huntington, characterizing statements made by Holt in handbills sent to WPA workers as "deliberately vicious."

The governor said he caused the handbills to be printed because of reports that WPA employes "were being strongly pressured and threatened with discharge" unless they voted for Senator M. M. Neely, gubernatorial candidate of the Democratic party's federal faction.

Holt told Alderson that he was "confident of your good intentions in this matter" but "you are, unfortunately, at the head of an organization which looks to people other than you for its principal instructions."

"The only additional suggestion that I can make," Holt added "is that you do not close your eyes to what is going on around you. The political activities of the WPA in West Virginia are now and have been for several years well known to all informed persons."

Alderson, in his letter, asserted that "it is absolutely astounding to me that a governor of this great state would so corrupt his high office as to issue a bulletin of innuendo, half-truths and deliberate misrepresentations."

Holt in saying he did not blame the administrator for the situation he claimed exists, asserted that as he had previously said the WPA "was set up" by Van A. Bittner and William Blizzard, United Mine Workers officials, and "some other appointees of John L. Lewis."

New Deal Waste Hit by Rush Holt

Fairmont, W. Va., May 7 (AP)—A supporter of social security legislation, Senator Rush D. Holt declared tonight that "I do not feel it has gone nearly far enough."

The youthful Weston Democrat, campaigning for re-election, declared in an address prepared for delivery by radio:

"People do not want the $10 and $12-a-month old age pensions. They do not want red tape that require a person to sign a pauper's oath before he can get assistance. There is far too much red tape in the administrative procedure in the distribution of relief."

Holt, declaring he had called for the "elimination of waste and extravagance in governmental expenditures," asserted:

"I did not think it was necessary for the government to have a survey to determine whether fishing worms like music, neither is it important for the tax payers to have a bulletin on the love life of the bull frog. All this money came from one place, the people."

He spoke later at a Wheeling rally.

Cards Wallop League Leading Dodgers 18-2

St. Louis Pounds Out 20 Hits and Seven Home Runs

Set New National League Record for Forty-nine Total Bases

St. Louis, May 7 (AP) — The Cardinals vented their pent up slugging spleen on the Brooklyn Dodgers today with a record collection of seven home runs and forty-nine total bases out of twenty hits — proving by an 18 to 2 affidavit that the National League leaders can be stopped.

The Redbirds kept up such a steady bombardment that Manager Leo Durocher of the Dodgers took over in the middle of the game, letting Pewee Reese substitute at shortstop, and kept Hugh Casey on the mound for seven innings to save wear and tear on his other pitchers.

Don Padgett started the big runs roaring in the second inning with a round tripper. Rookie infielder Eddie Lake followed with one in the third and another with one on in the eighth. Johnny Mize hit for the circuit also in the third with one on and again in the eighth with none on. Stu Martin joined in the shooting with one in the fourth and Joe Medwick hit one in the sixth with one on.

Behind this powerful offensive Lonnie Warneke pitched shutout ball for seven innings and weakened only in the eighth when the Dodgers got four of their nine hits and both their runs.

The seven homers hit by the Cards tied a National League peak reached five times in the past. The Yankees set the Major League high of eight in the American League last year.

The forty-nine total bases on seven homers, two triples, four doubles and seven singles betered the modern National League mark of forty-seven set by the New York Giants in 1931, but also was four short of the Yanks' Major League level of last year.

N.B.A. Makes Angott Its Own World Champ

By JOHN LARDNER

Released by North American Newspaper Alliance

New York, May 7 — In Louisville the other evening the National (well, fairly national) Boxing Association created another new world's champion of its own, in opposition to Mike Jacob's house champion.

This cataclysmic event occurred in the lightweight division, which is now split down the middle like a Dutch treat check. One Samuel Angott took a decision from the forlorn Chicago pugilist known as Davey Day, and the N. B. A. rared back and hit Mr. Angott upon the brow with its accolade, designing Samuel as the one and only lightweight champion of the world.

Mr. Angott blushed gracefully and promised to be a fighting champion in forty-six states and Alaska. In New York state, of course, he will be plain Mr. Angott — a fine old title in itself.

When notified (out of a sound sleep) that he had just been relieved of his claim to forty-six states and several provinces, Lou Ambers, the other world's champion, rolled over in his bed and asked to be called at 10:30.

Development Rocks World

The rest of the world (now shared, as I get it, by Mr. Ambers and Mr. Angott on a catch-as-catch-can basis) was rocked to its foundation by the new development. Everywhere — especially in Norway, Denmark, Finland and China—they are asking themselves which to acknowledge, Angott or Ambers. His majesty's government is agog, and Hitler is thinking of suspending hostilities until the matter can be straightened out.

My own attitude toward the fairly National Boxing Association has mellowed with time (I'll bet they whoop with delight at the N. B. A. and kick their heels together when they hear that.)

The officials seem to be honest, in the main, and while aiming devious kicks at Mike Jacobs in their spare time they are doing their best to rescue boxing from the muddle into which many agents, including the N. B. A., have plunged it.

Unhappily, some of the boys who get championships from the N. B. A. for perfect attendance and clean finger-nails are not very much as fighters. It's hard—to blame the N. B. A. for being sore at Ambers, a willful fellow, and penalizing him for his idleness. At the same time it's hard to keep from laughing at the idea that Angott is a better man than Ambers.

When Angott is appointed champion, it means that he is the best lightweight in the world. And everybody knows different.

Ambers could save the N. B. A. a lot of embarrassment by behaving himself and fighting the boys they ask him to fight. But Ambers will do no such thing, as long as he is managed by (Weskit) Weill and as long as the Weskit affiliates himself with Mr. Jacobs.

It's the matter of the independent against the group, and the sad part of it is that the independent, for all his sordid character, is the best lightweight fighter in the world.

This may not be true much longer. Though young, Lou Ambers has been fighting for quite a spell. In a year or two some fellow may beat him, and if the N. B. A. is lucky it will be one of their own fellows, and they will finally have a logical champion.

An Accomplished Fighter

But such is not the case today. Ambers — who learned his trade by fighting the great ones, McLarnin, Canzoneri, and Armstrong — appears to be at his peak. People are beginning to realize that in spite of his uncouth appearance and jigging, monkey-like style, the hollow-eyed little Italian from Herkimer is one of the most accomplished fighters of our time, tough and rounded and supremely competent.

No true puncher himself, his aim is deadly enough to bring down the staunchest foe if you give him time. Offensively, he is a well-oiled buzz-saw. Defensively, he has no flaw. His stamina is tremendous; he can take a punch; he is fast; he likes to fight, and his instinct for his game is as true as a good surgeon's. Even a freak of strength and vitality like Henry Armstrong will find him too much to handle now, though such was not always the case.

It took Ambers time to reach his present standard of ability, and he may not hold the peak for long. But, today he is the best lightweight, and Samuel Angott with his forty-six states and his territories, is playing make-believe.

In deference to the N. B. A., I think Lou should fight Mr. Angott right away. If he doesn't, he is a low and evasive character. But still the best lightweight.

Protested Softball Game To Be Replayed

The recent Narrow's Park-Corriganville County Softball League game at Corriganville, which ended in a dispute with the score deadlocked, was ordered replayed at Corriganville today at a special loop session at the LaVale Firemen's Hall Monday night.

Managers, captains and scorekeepers of the rival teams and the two umpires involved met with President Lawrence Gerbing, Vice-President Walters and Secretary Lloyd Smith.

Following charges and countercharges Gerbing reprimanded both teams and issued a final warning to managers to uphold league rules or run the risk of fines and suspensions in the event of future rowdyism.

The executive board ruled that inasmuch as both managers were equally guilty of violations of league regulations that the game be replayed as a new contest tomorrow. Corriganville was also ordered to pay the umpires in full for their services in the protested game.

Dizzy Dean Is Assigned to Relief Role

Wrigley Is Not Yet Ready To Pass Final Judgement on Ol' Diz

By EARL HILLIGAN

Chicago, May 7 (AP)—Dizzy Dean, who had it once, is going on relief.

The pitcher for whom the Chicago Cubs paid $185,000 in cash has been relegated to the role of a reserve moundsman. But Owner P. K. Wrigley is not yet ready to pass final judgment on the high righthander who only six years ago won thirty games at St. Louis, won the National League flag and the World Series.

He's willing to give Ol' Diz at least one more chance before putting a "period" to one of the most spectacular, up-and-down, news-making careers baseball ever knew.

"With the record he's made I don't know who we could trade him to now," said Wrigley of the player who yesterday was knocked out of the box for the third time in four starts this season. "Of course it's a little early to make a decision yet, Bill Lee, you know, hasn't been so hot, either. Right at this time we haven't any deals involving Diz under consideration."

Manager Gabby Hartnett announced after today's game that Ken Raffenberger, twenty-two-year-old southpaw who started pitching six years ago with the York, Pa., American League Team, would start tomorrow's game against Brooklyn. Raffensberger, taking over Dean's spot among the starting four, has allowed two runs and nine hits in eleven innings of relief work.

The word immediately got around that Dean planned to quit the Cubs and return to his Texas farm, but he denied this report.

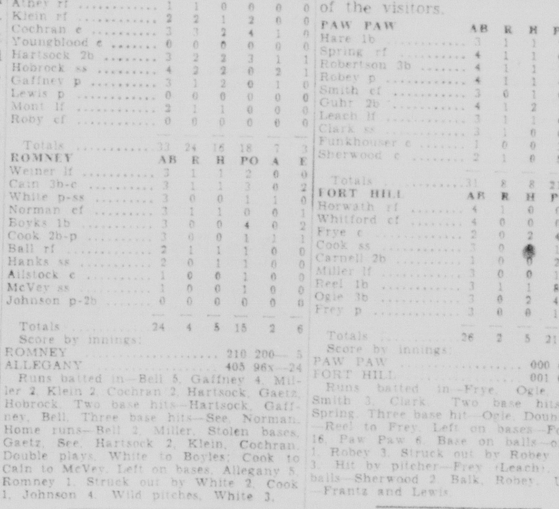

"I've never been a quitter and I won't quit now," snapped Dean. "I don't know where such rumors could start. I'm going to keep on working as hard as I can and helping the Cubs in every way I can."

Cards Wallop League Leading Dodgers 18-2

St. Louis Pounds Out 20 Hits and Seven Home Runs

Set New National League Record for Forty-nine Total Bases

St. Louis, May 7 (AP) — The Cardinals vented their pent up slugging spleen on the Brooklyn Dodgers today with a record collection of seven home runs and forty-nine total bases out of twenty hits — proving by an 18 to 2 affidavit that the National League leaders can be stopped.

The Redbirds kept up such a steady bombardment that Manager Leo Durocher of the Dodgers took over in the middle of the game, letting Pewee Reese substitute at shortstop, and kept Hugh Casey on the mound for seven innings to save wear and tear on his other pitchers.

Don Padgett started the big runs soaring in the second inning with a round tripper. Rookie infielder Eddie Lake followed with one in the third and another with one on in the eighth. Johnny Mize hit for the circuit also in the third with one on and again in the eighth with none on. Stu Martin joined in the shooting with one in the fourth and Joe Medwick hit one in the sixth with one on.

Behind this powerful offensive Lonnie Warneke pitched shutout ball for seven innings and weakened only in the eighth when the Dodgers got four of their nine hits and both their runs.

The seven homers hit by the Cards tied a National League peak reached five times in the past. The Yankees set the Major League high of eight in the American League last year.

The forty-nine total bases on seven homers, two triples, four doubles and seven singles betered the modern National League mark of forty-seven set by the New York Giants in 1931, but also was four short of the Yanks' Major League level of last year.

N.B.A. Makes Angott Its Own World Champ

Released by North American Newspaper Alliance

New York, May 7 — In Louisville the other evening the National (well, fairly national) Boxing Association created another new world's champion of its own, in opposition to Mike Jacob's house champion.

This cataclysmic event occurred in the lightweight division, which is now split down the middle like a Dutch treat check. One Samuel Angott took a decision from the forlorn Chicago pugilist known as Davey Day, and the N. B. A. rared back and hit Mr. Angott upon the brow with its accolade, designing Samuel as the one and only lightweight champion of the world.

Mr. Angott blushed gracefully and promised to be a fighting champion in forty-six states and Alaska. In New York state, of course, he will be plain Mr. Angott — a fine old title in itself.

When notified (out of a sound sleep) that he had just been relieved of his claim to forty-six states and several provinces, Lou Ambers, the other world's champion, rolled over in his bed and asked to be called at 10:30.

Development Rocks World

The rest of the world (now shared, as I get it, by Mr. Ambers and Mr. Angott on a catch-as-catch-can basis) was rocked to its foundation by the new development. Everywhere — especially in Norway, Denmark, Finland and China—they are asking themselves which to acknowledge, Angott or Ambers. His majesty's government is agog and Hitler is thinking of suspending hostilities until the matter can be straightened out.

My own attitude toward the fairly National Boxing Association has mellowed with time. (I'll bet they whoop with delight at the N. B. A. and kick their heels together when they hear that.)

The officials seem to be honest, in the main, and while aiming devious kicks at Mr. Jacobs in their spare time they are doing their best to rescue boxing from the muddle into which many agents, including the N. B. A., have plunged it.

Unhappily, some of the boys who get championships from the N. B. A. for perfect attendance and clean finger-nails are not very much as fighters. It's hard to blame the N. B. A. for being sore at Ambers, a willful fellow, and penalizing him for his idleness. At the same time it's hard to keep from laughing at the idea that Angott is a better man than Ambers.

When Angott is appointed champion, it means that he is the best lightweight in the world. And everybody knows different.

Ambers could save the N. B. A. a lot of embarrassment by behaving himself and fighting the boys they ask him to fight. But Ambers will do no such thing, as long as he is managed by (Weskit) Weill and as long as the Weskit affiliates himself with Mr. Jacobs.

It's the matter of the independent against the group, and the sad part of it is that the independent, for all his sordid character, is the best lightweight fighter in the world.

This may not be true much longer. Though young, Lou Ambers has been fighting for quite a spell. In a year or two some fellow may beat him, and if the N. B. A. is lucky it will be one of their own fellows, and they will finally have a logical champion.

An Accomplished Fighter

But such is not the case today. Ambers — who learned his trade by fighting the great ones, McLarnin, Canzoneri, and Armstrong — appears to be at his peak. People are beginning to realize that in spite of his uncouth appearance and jigging, monkey-like style, the hollow-eyed little Italian from Herkimer is one of the most accomplished fighters of our time, tough and rounded and supremely competent.

No true puncher himself, his aim is deadly enough to bring down the staunchest foe if you give him time. Offensively, he is a well-oiled buzz-saw. Defensively, he has no flaw. His stamina is tremendous; he can take a punch; he is fast; he likes to fight, and his instinct for his game is as true as a good surgeon's. Even a freak of strength and vitality like Henry Armstrong will find him too much to handle now, though such was not always the case.

It took Ambers time to reach his present standard of ability, and he may not hold the peak for long. But, today he is the best lightweight, and Samuel Angott with his forty-six states and his territories, is playing make-believe.

In deference to the N. B. A., I think Lou should fight Mr. Angott right away. If he doesn't, he is a low and evasive character. But still the best lightweight.

Protested Softball Game To Be Replayed

The recent Narrow's Park-Corriganville County Softball League game at Corriganville, which ended in a dispute with the score deadlocked, was ordered replayed at Corriganville today at a special loop session at the LaVale Firemen's Hall Monday night.

Managers, captains and scorekeepers of the rival teams and the two umpires involved met with President Lawrence Gerbing, Vice-President Walters and Secretary Lloyd Smith.

Following charges and countercharges Gerbing reprimanded both teams and issued a final warning to managers to uphold league rules or run the risk of fines and suspensions in the event of future rowdyism.

The executive board ruled that inasmuch as both managers were equally guilty of violations of league regulations that the game be replayed as a new contest tomorrow. Corriganville was also ordered to pay the umpires in full for their services in the protested game.

Dizzy Dean Is Assigned to Relief Role

Wrigley Is Not Yet Ready To Pass Final Judgement on Ol' Diz

By EARL HILLIGAN

Chicago, May 7 (AP)—Dizzy Dean, who had it once, is going on relief.

The pitcher for whom the Chicago Cubs paid $185,000 in cash has been relegated to the role of a reserve moundsman. But Owner P. K. Wrigley is not yet ready to pass final judgment on the high righthander who only six years ago won thirty games at St. Louis, won the National League flag and the World Series.

He's willing to give Ol' Diz at least one more chance before putting a "period" to one of the most spectacular, up-and-down, news-making careers baseball ever knew.

"With the record he's made I don't know who we could trade him to now," said Wrigley of the player who yesterday was knocked out of the box for the third time in four starts this season. "Of course it's a little early to make a decision yet, Bill Lee, you know, hasn't been so hot, either. Right at this time we haven't any deals involving Diz under consideration."

Manager Gabby Hartnett announced after today's game that Ken Raffenberger, twenty-two-year-old southpaw who started pitching six years ago with the York, Pa., American League Team, would start tomorrow's game against Brooklyn, Raffensberger, taking over Dean's spot among the starting four, has allowed two runs and nine hits in eleven innings of relief work.

The word immediately got around that Dean planned to quit the Cubs and return to his Texas farm, but he denied this report.

"I've never been a quitter and I won't quit now," snapped Dean. "I don't know where such rumors could start. I'm going to keep on working as hard as I can and helping the Cubs in every way I can."

Yankees Lose with DiMaggio back in Lineup

Champions Lose Fourth Straight Game; Score 4 - 2

Tigers Continue Fine Play as Rookie Southpaw Hurls Brilliantly

New York, May 7 (AP)—Even Joe DiMaggio couldn't break the jinx lefthand pitching today for the New York Yankees and the Detroit Tigers slapped a fourth consecutive defeat on the World Champions 4 to 2.

DiMaggio made an unheralded appearance in the Yankee lineup, limping slightly as he patrolled centerfield for the first time this season. He singled once with the bases empty, but he was an easy out in the first inning and fouled out with the bases loaded in the seventh.

Altogether the Yanks got nine hits and six walks, but they never had a chance against young Harold Newhouser, the rookie southpaw, who struck out six and kept the hits scattered except in the sixth, when two singles and an infield out scored a run.

PAR JUST ISN'T MADE ON THIS TRICKY GOLF COURSE

The 18th green

Fairway of ninth hole

Less than one per cent of over 4,000 players have made par on the tricky golf course at Sun Valley, Idaho. Designed by William P. Bell, the course is at virtually mountain top elevation, 6,000 feet above sea level, and is dotted with creeks. An unusual feature of the course is that there is only nine greens but 18 tees. Par for each nine is 36 and the longest hole is 560 yards at par five.

BACK IN REBUTTAL

A heavy charge of impending blindness was thrown against us from many sections of the map for picking the Cincinnati Reds' pitching staff as the best in the country. We were informed in many words that Paul Derringer was getting old and that Bucky Walters had a lucky year last season. Together they won fifty-two games.

We figured the two galloping aces for something between forty-five and fifty this year. We'll still trail along with that prophecy. Both are still great pitchers and both have gotten away nicely in spite of a killing spring.

You don't have to worry about Derringer and Walters. They are two of the best, and neither is slipping. They have the stuff and both are smart. They happen to know what it's all about.

Derringer is a strapping big fellow who won't be thirty-four years old until October. He has one of the smoothest of all pitching motions and still has good years left. He is still seven years younger than Lefty Grove, who is no set-up for any of the swingers.

Bucky Walters is only thirty and he has been pitching only five years. He still has a full supply of elastic left in his right arm.

And, once more, you may remember that a fellow named Junior Thompson will be heard from in even louder tones this summer. Here are three crack starting pitchers, with Whitey Moore, Jim Turner and Johnny Vander Meer on the hand to help.

If you can name me a better pitching staff I'd like to get the answer.

The Dodger Angle

Just what may happen to the MacPhail-Durocher Dodgers in the near future is still puzzling the non-combatants.

In the way of ball playing talent they don't rate their spot. But they have shown against what the old zip, red-hot spirit and enthusiasm can do. They have been playing heads-up baseball, with stout hearts to make up for other deficiencies.

They had little to beat in the East against the Giants, Bees and Phillies, the weakest sector I've seen in years. They should face much tougher riding in the West where the pennant strength seems to be piled up.

If they can hold their own on this first western invasion that same spirit may give them a big lead. They have the needed punch, but it is now largely a question as to how their pitching will hold up.

So far the Cubs, Pirates and Cardinals haven't been any too hot. The Cardinals especially have been on the straggling side. They gave the Reds a killing margin last summer—something like 14 or 15 games—and then almost nailed them at the wire.

They had better begin closing in on both the Dodgers and Reds. Ball games won in April and May still count.

I'm not sure the Dodgers can lead any pennant run. I think the Reds can with the pitching they have.

What About the Yankees?

In the last few days two leading queries have come our way. What happened to Bimelech? What's happening to the Yankees?

Bimelech was a 1-2 shot in Kentucky. Jack Doyle, the veteran betting commissioner, rated the Yankees 1-3 in the A. L. parade.

Bimelech proved he was no 1-2 horse and the Yankees so far haven't looked the part of any 1-3 entry.

The absence of Joe DiMaggio hasn't been any uplifting turn. One great ball player can make one great difference. But a ball player with a bad knee is no hot gamble. The first quick start or the first sudden jolt can throw out a knee ligament in less than a split second.

I think Bimelech is the horse to beat in the Preakness, and I think the Yankees are the team to beat in the American League race. But there is a dark shadow over their invincibility. There are no supermen nor superhorses.

The long spell of cold, damp weather has upset training plans for both men and horses. You might say the same weather fell upon them all. This is quite true, but the fact remains such conditions might affect certain human beings and certain horses more than it will affect others.

The type of March, April and early May we have drawn has been a big factor in scrambling up the dope. So far it has affected headliners more than the ontside selections.

This frequently happens. The more costly the bric-a-brac is, the more brittle it is. That's what makes it costly. You can't crack a pewter mug by dropping it on concrete.

The next few weeks offer us many interesting moments in watching the careers of the Yankees and Bimelech, two of the hottest favorites that ever got away from the barriers—and then took a dip.

But the "red deeps of May" are still ahead, and so is another summer. The main idea is to find what blue skies, softer winds and a warming sun will do.

How To Wind Rod

Here is a good way to wind a fishing rod. Lay the end of the silk thread on the rod and wrap the first few turns over it; wrap the last few turns over a separate thread loop; the end of the thread is drawn through the loop and pulled tight. Cut off the loose end of the thread with a razor blade.

White Sox Win Over Athletics

Five Hit Pitching by Knott and Appleton Holds A's in Check

Philadelphia, May 7 (AP) — Five-hit pitching by Jack Knott and Pete Appleton, helped along by four Philadelphia errors, gave Chicago a 6 to 3 win over the Athletics today and two games out of their three-game series.

Four of the White Sox runs were unearned.

Knott allowed one run and three hits in the first two innings, then tightened up and pitched no-hit ball until the seventh when he passed three A's batters. A single pushed one of the free riders across the plate. Appleton, relieving Knott, issued a pass to Benny McCoy, forcing in another A's run.

Cliff Fearer Elected President of Six-Club Circuit at Central "Y"

A six-club City Softball League was organized Monday night when Cliff Fearer, well known basketball official and sports fan, was elected to serve as president.

Other officers, chosen by representatives of the six clubs at a meeting held at the Central Y. M. C. A., are James Hill, treasurer, and Donald Lees, secretary.

Leaders of the teams decided to affiliate with the Playground Athletic League of Maryland, thus assuring the team capturing the title a spot in the annual state championship tournament.

Final plans for the season, tentatively slated to open Wednesday, May 15, will be made at another session to be held Thursday night at 8 o'clock at the "Y". Arrangements for fields and umpires will be considered and franchise forfeits fixed at this meeting.

The league will consist of the Police Boys' Club, Ridgeley Rod and Gun Club, Bowman's Grocery, North End Merchants, Cumberland Comets and another team from the South End sector.

The constitution and by-laws, also drawn at last night's meeting, will be subject to revision and amendments at Thursday's confab.

1940 Bowling Congress Is Nearing End

100,000 Spectators Have Paid To See 6,000 Teams in Action

Detroit, May 7, (AP). The sixty-two-day American Bowling Congress Championships, longest and biggest tournament in ABC history, entered its final hours tonight with high leaders in minor events undisturbed.

Some 100,000 spectators have paid since March 7 to see members of the 6,000 teams bombard the pins.

Although no ABC scoring record was exceeded, the 1940 tournament did gain the distinction of being the only one in which two perfect "300" games were rolled.

George Pallage, Akron, O., fired twelve consecutive strikes April 13 and the feat was duplicated a week later by Angelo (Mike) Domenico of Canton, O.

The leading total in the doubles, 1,346, scored April 20 by Chicago's Joe Sinke and Herbie Freitag, is 59 pins shy of the 1,405 tally which won the championship for Phil Icuss and Murray Fowler, Steubenville, O., last year. The total is worth $600 to the Windy City vets.

A total of 2,081 double teams will split the $67,280 prize money in the two-man event with an approximate score of 1111 being low to cash.

Ray Brown, with a 742 singles series of 231, 278 and 233 on April 23, was expected to give Terre Haute, Ind., its first National title.

First prize in the singles competition is $300 while 4,177 keglers will share in the extended prize list with 572 the approximate figure in line for a pay check.

In hitting 688 in the team event, 667 doubles and 646 in the singles competition, Fred Fischer of Buffalo, N. Y., rolled up an average of 222.3 for his nine games in posting an all-events total of 2001.

A total of 416 bowlers will share in the all-events prize fund with a count of 1,775 being the low figure in the prize money.

Don't Signs Eliminated

"Don't" signs were the first thing to go at the Louisville baseball park after the change in management. Such warnings go against the grain of the customers, it was explained.

PAR JUST ISN'T MADE ON THIS TRICKY GOLF COURSE

First and 10th greens

The 18th green

Fairway of ninth hole

Less than one per cent of over 4,000 players have made par on the tricky golf course at Sun Valley, Idaho. Designed by William P. Bell, the course is at virtually mountain top elevation, 6,000 feet above sea level, and is dotted with creeks. An unusual feature of the course is that there is only nine greens but 18 tees. Par for each nine is 36 and the longest hole is 560 yards at par five.

BACK IN REBUTTAL

A heavy charge of impending blindness was thrown against us from many sections of the map for picking the Cincinnati Reds' pitching staff as the best in the country. We were informed in many words that Paul Derringer was getting old and that Bucky Walters had a lucky year last season. Together they won fifty-two games.

We figured the two galloping aces for something between forty-five and fifty this year. We'll still trail along with that prophecy. Both are still great pitchers and both have gotten away nicely in spite of a killing spring.

You don't have to worry about Derringer and Walters. They are two of the best, and neither is slipping. They have the stuff and both are smart. They happen to know what it's all about.

Derringer is a strapping big fellow who won't be thirty-four years old until October. He has one of the smoothest of all pitching motions and still has good years left. He is still seven years younger than Lefty Grove, who is no set-up for any of the swingers.

Bucky Walters is only thirty and he has been pitching only five years. He still has a full supply of elastic left in his right arm.

And, once more, you may remember that a fellow named Junior Thompson will be heard from in even louder tones this summer. Here are three crack starting pitchers, with Whitey Moore, Jim Turner and Johnny Vander Meer on the hand to help.

If you can name me a better pitching staff I'd like to get the answer.

The Dodger Angle

Just what may happen to the MacPhail-Durocher Dodgers in the near future is still puzzling the non-combatants.

In the way of ball playing talent they don't rate their spot. But they have shown against what the old zip, red-hot spirit and enthusiasm can do. They have been playing heads-up baseball, with stout hearts to make up for other deficiencies.

They had little to beat in the East against the Giants, Bees and Phillies, the weakest sector I've seen in years. They should face much tougher riding in the West where the pennant strength seems to be piled up.

If they can hold their own on this first western invasion that same spirit may give them a big lead. They have the needed punch, but it is now largely a question as to how their pitching will hold up.

So far the Cubs, Pirates and Cardinals haven't been any too hot. The Cardinals especially have been on the straggling side. They gave the Reds a killing margin last summer—something like 14 or 15 games—and then almost nailed them at the wire.

They had better begin closing in on both the Dodgers and Reds. Ball games won in April and May still count.

I'm not sure the Dodgers can lead any pennant run. I think the Reds can with the pitching they have.

What About the Yankees?

In the last few days two leading queries have come our way. What happened to Bimelech? What's happening to the Yankees?

Bimelech was a 1-2 shot in Kentucky. Jack Doyle, the veteran betting commissioner, rated the Yankees 1-3 in the A. L. parade.

Bimelech proved he was no 1-2 horse and the Yankees so far haven't looked the part of any 1-3 entry.

The absence of Joe DiMaggio hasn't been any uplifting turn. One great ball player can make one great difference. But a ball player with a bad knee is no hot gamble. The first quick start or the first sudden jolt can throw out a knee ligament in less than a split second.

I think Bimelech is the horse to beat in the Preakness, and I think the Yankees are the team to beat in the American League race. But there is a dark shadow over their invincibility. There are no supermen nor superhorses.

The long spell of cold, damp weather has upset training plans for both men and horses. You might say the same weather fell upon them all. This is quite true, but the fact remains such conditions might affect certain human beings and certain horses more than it will affect others.

The type of March, April and early May we have has been a big factor in scrambling up the dope. So far it has affected headliners more than the outside selections.

This frequently happens. The more costly the bric-a-brac is, the more brittle it is. That's what makes it costly. You can't crack a pewter mug by dropping it on concrete.

The next few weeks offer us many interesting moments in watching the careers of the Yankees and Bimelech, two of the hottest favorites that ever got away from the barriers—and then took a dip.

But the "red deeps of May" are still ahead, and so is another summer. The main idea is to find what blue skies, softer winds and a warming sun will do.

How To Wind Rod

Here is a good way to wind a fishing rod. Lay the end of the silk thread on the rod and wrap the first few turns over it; wrap the last few turns over a separate thread loop; the end of the thread is drawn through the loop and pulled tight. Cut off the loose end of the thread with a razor blade.

White Sox Win Over Athletics

Five Hit Pitching by Knott and Appleton Holds A's in Check

Philadelphia, May 7 (AP) — Five-hit pitching by Jack Knott and Pete Appleton, helped along by four Philadelphia errors, gave Chicago a 6 to 3 win over the Athletics today and two games out of their three-game series.

Four of the White Sox runs were unearned.

Knott allowed one run and three hits in the first two innings, then tightened up and pitched no-hit ball until the seventh when he passed three A's batters. A single pushed one of the free riders across the plate. Appleton, relieving Knott, issued a pass to Benny McCoy, forcing in another A's run.

Cliff Fearer Elected President of Six-Club Circuit at Central "Y"

A six-club City Softball League was organized Monday night when Cliff Fearer, well known basketball official and sports fan, was elected to serve as president.

Other officers, chosen by representatives of the six clubs at a meeting held at the Central Y. M. C. A., are James Hill, treasurer and Donald Lees, secretary.

Leaders of the teams decided to affiliate with the Playground Athletic League of Maryland, thus assuring the team capturing the title a spot in the annual state championship tournament.

Final plans for the season, tentatively slated to open Wednesday, May 15, will be made at another session to be held Thursday night at 8 o'clock at the "Y". Arrangements for fields and umpires will be considered and franchise forfeits fixed at this meeting.

The league will consist of the Police Boys' Club, Ridgeley Rod and Gun Club, Bowman's Grocery, North End Merchants, Cumberland Comets and another team from the South End sector.

The constitution and by-laws, also drawn at last night's meeting, will be subject to revision and amendments at Thursday's confab.

1940 Bowling Congress Is Nearing End

100,000 Spectators Have Paid To See 6,000 Teams in Action

Detroit, May 7, (AP). The sixty-two-day American Bowling Congress Championships, longest and biggest tournament in ABC history, entered its final hours tonight with high leaders in minor events undisturbed.

Some 100,000 spectators have paid since March 7 to see members of the 6,000 teams bombard the pins.

Although no ABC scoring record was exceeded, the 1940 tournament did gain the distinction of being the only one in which two perfect "300" games were rolled.

George Pallage, Akron, O., fired twelve consecutive strikes April 15 and the feat was duplicated a week later by Angelo (Mike) Domenico of Canton, O.

The leading total in the doubles, 1,346, scored April 20 by Chicago's Joe Sinke and Herbie Freitag, is 59 pins shy of the 1,405 tally which won the championship for Phil Icuss and Murray Fowler, Steubenville, O., last year. The total is worth $600 to the Windy City vets.

A total of 2,081 double teams will split the $67,280 prize money in the two-man event with an approximate score of 1111 being low to cash.

Ray Brown, with a 742 singles series of 231, 278 and 233 on April 23, was expected to give Terre Haute, Ind., its first National title.

First prize in the singles competition is $300 while 4,177 keglers will share in the extended prize list with 572 the approximate figure in line for a pay check.

In hitting 688 in the team event, 667 doubles and 646 in the singles competition, Fred Fischer of Buffalo, N. Y., rolled up an average of 222.3 for his nine games in posting an all-events total of 2001.

A total of 416 bowlers will share in the all-events prize fund with a count of 1,775 being the low figure in the prize money.

Red Sox Strengthen Hold on First Place

Grove Receives Credit for Win But Is Hit Hard

Hitting of Finney and Desautels Gives Boston 6-4 Victory

Boston, May 7 (AP)—The timely hitting of Lou Finney and Gene DeSaultels was more effective than the barrage aimed at the veteran Bob Grove today and the Red Sox strengthened their grasp on first place in the American League by defeating the Cleveland Indians, 6-4.

The victors out-hit the Sox, 13-8, in the series finale. All but one of the hits were against the venerable southpaw, who quit the mound in the eighth inning after Hal Trosky and Rolly Hemsley homered and Ken Keltner singled for a three-run rally that was choked off by Rookie Herb Hash.

Although Grove was hit hard from the start, he kept the Indians scoreless until the seventh, when with two out, he walked Ray Mack and gave singles to Lou Boudreau and Roy Weatherly.

The Red Sox, however, piled up enough runs to win in the first three innings against Mike Naymick, the six-foot-eight starter, and Johnny Allen. Three other Cleveland hurlers were pressed into service before the game ended.

Danning Is Goat As Reds Defeat New York 7 to 6

Cincinnati Scores Fifth Straight Triumph as Giants Drop Another

Cincinnati, May 7 (AP) — Harry Danning tried hard to be a hero today, getting two home runs and a single to bat in four of the New York Giants' runs, but he had to be the goat of a 7 to 6 victory by the Cincinnati Reds.

It was the fifth straight triumph for the National League Champions and the fourth consecutive loss for the Giants.

Trailing by one run in the eighth after Danning had homered with two on in the first half of the inning, the Reds tied the score when the big catcher dropped the ball on a double steal.

Eddie Joost started the inning by beating out a hit, moving around on a sacrifice and a wild pitch. Then Lonnie Frey walked and on the double steal Joost ran into Danning to juggle the ball loose. Frank McCormick completed the damage with a single scoring Frey.

The SPORT TRAIL

By WHITNEY MARTIN

New York, May 7 (AP)—The hours are nice and the pay is good, but sometimes Mickey McAvoy gets to wondering if maybe he shouldn't change jobs. There just doesn't seem to be any future as sparring partner of Joe Louis.

Mickey has worked 350 rounds with the bomber. When it is considered that five rounds is about par for Louis' fights, the feat takes on some significance.

It has been suggested that Mickey is filled with sawdust and they just re-stuff him after every workout, but we never took much stock in that.

McAvoy is Mr. Spar himself. For more than ten of his twenty-eight years he has been offering himself as a punching bag, and in that time he has worked with eleven champions and about a hundred would-be champions.

* * *

Joe Louis is tops with him, both as a regular fellow and as a fighter, although he has kind words for others. In fact, he thinks Mickey Walker could lick any of the heavyweights around today except Louis.

"I've worked with most of them," he says, "Braddock, Max Baer, Carnera, Sharkey, Billy Conn, Maxie Rosenbloom, John Henry Lewis, Galento. Used to get $25 a round from Schmeling and Sharkey. I get $15 from Louis now.

"I was knocked down by Louis just once. They're all out to flatten you if they can. You run across all styles. Walker was a rough one, and Galento is dirty rough. I gave him the elbow once and he ripped off his gloves and wanted to lick me right there, but he came around afterward and was all right.

"They like to work with me because I can teach them something. Nobody can hit me in a clinch.

"Don't underestimate that Joe Louis. He's fast and clever, moves you around and sets you up.

* * *

"He's by far the hardest hitter I've worked with. There's something about his punches that seems to paralyze you. When I get done working with him I feel like I got bumps all over.

"And don't worry about anybody knocking him out. They'll have to use a hammer. He took sixty-two right hand punches on the chin, against Schmeling, and he still wasn't out. Did anybody else ever do that?"

In addition to his punching bag routine, Mickey has had about 125 fights on his own. "Beat Natie Brown about three months ago," he says proudly.

But if he was starting over he'd make a rounds in a blue uniform. "That's what I'd be," he says sadly, "a policeman."

Phillie Rookie Hurls Shutout Against Chicago

Ike Pearson Wins 1 to 0 Victory by Pitching Four-Hit Game

Chicago, May 7 (AP)—Ike Pearson, twenty-three-year-old Philadelphia right hander who jumped from the Mississippi State University campus to the Majors last June, whitewashed the Chicago Cubs with a four-hitter today, 1 to 0, in the "rubber" game of their series.

An unusual error by Catcher Al Todd produced the game's lone run. Ben Warren beat out an infield hit in the fifth went to second on a base on balls and reached third in a double play. He scored when a third strike on Pearson caromed off Todd's glove and rolled several feet away.

Grove Receives Credit for Win But Is Hit Hard

Hitting of Finney and Desautels Gives Boston 6-4 Victory

Boston, May 7 (AP)—The timely hitting of Lou Finney and Gene DeSaultels was more effective than the barrage aimed at the veteran Lefty Grove today and the Red Sox strengthened their grasp on first place in the American League by defeating the Cleveland Indians, 6-4.

The victors out-hit the Sox, 13-8, in the series finale. All but one of the hits were against the venerable southpaw, who quit the mound in the eighth inning after Hal Trosky and Rolly Hemsley homered and Ken Keltner singled for a three-run rally that was choked off by Rookie Herb Hash.

Although Grove was hit hard from the start, he kept the Indians scoreless until the seventh, when with two out, he walked Ray Mack and gave singles to Lou Boudreau and Roy Weatherly.

The Red Sox, however, piled up enough runs to win in the first three innings against Mike Naymick, the six-foot-eight starter, and Johnny Allen. Three other Cleveland hurlers were pressed into service before the game ended.

Grove was credited with his second victory of the season.

The SPORT TRAIL

By WHITNEY MARTIN

New York, May 7 (AP)—The hours are nice and the pay is good, but sometimes Mickey McAvoy gets to wondering if maybe he shouldn't change jobs. There just doesn't seem to be any future as sparring partner of Joe Louis.

Mickey has worked 350 rounds with the bomber. When it is considered that five rounds is about par for Louis' fights, the feat takes on some significance.

It has been suggested that Mickey is filled with sawdust and they just re-stuff him after every workout, but we never took much stock in that.

McAvoy is Mr. Spar himself. For more than ten of his twenty-eight years he has been offering himself as a punching bag, and in that time he has worked with eleven champions and about a hundred would-be champions.

* * *

Joe Louis is tops with him, both as a regular fellow and as a fighter, although he has kind words for others. In fact, he thinks Mickey Walker could lick any of the heavyweights around today except Louis.

"I've worked with most of them," he says, "Braddock, Max Baer, Carnera, Sharkey, Billy Conn, Maxie Rosenbloom, John Henry Lewis, Galento. Used to get $25 a round from Schmeling and Sharkey. I get $15 from Louis now.

"I was knocked down by Louis just once. They're all out to flatten you if they can. You run across all styles. Walker was a rough one, and Galento is dirty rough. I gave him the elbow once and he ripped off his gloves and wanted to lick me right there, but he came around afterward and was all right.

"They like to work with me because I can teach them something. Nobody can hit me in a clinch.

"Don't underestimate that Joe Louis. He's fast and clever, moves you around and sets you up.

* * *

"He's by far the hardest hitter I've worked with. There's something about his punches that seems to paralyze you. When I get done working with him I feel like I got bumps all over.

"And don't worry about anybody knocking him out. They'll have to use a hammer. He took sixty-two right hand punches on the chin, against Schmeling, and he still wasn't out. Did anybody else ever do that?"

In addition to his punching bag routine, Mickey has had about 125 fights on his own. "Beat Natie Brown about three months ago," he says proudly.

But if he was starting over he'd make a rounds in a blue uniform.

Phillie Rookie Hurls Shutout Against Chicago

Ike Pearson Wins 1 to 0 Victory by Pitching Four-Hit Game

Chicago, May 7 (AP)—Ike Pearson, twenty-three-year-old Philadelphia right hander who jumped from the Mississippi State University campus to the Majors last June, whitewashed the Chicago Cubs with a four-hitter today, 1 to 0, in the "rubber" game of their series.

An unusual error by Catcher Al Todd produced the game's lone run. Ben Warren beat out an infield hit in the fifth went to second on a base on balls and reached third in a double play. He scored when a third strike on Pearson caromed off Todd's glove and rolled several feet away.

"He doesn't LOOK good"

There is a story of a horse-trader who seemed reluctant to sell one of his horses to a prospective buyer because, as he said, "That horse doesn't look good."

The buyer, suspecting that the dealer was trying to outwit him, felt the horse over carefully, looked in its mouth, and decided that the horse looked very well. Whereupon he bought the animal and led it to his stable.

When he harnessed it and started down the road, he soon discovered that the dealer had been right. The horse didn't "look good." It was blind.

CHAPTER FIVE

"DID YOU want us to start right now, Mr. Bailey?" little Tempe Hyde accosted in a corridor of the Merrifield sion. "The girls sort of ap- ed me as their spokesman."

"Humph!" Bill coughed, stall- for time. He looked hopefully, futilely, at Gayle Dixon, who with him. Then he turned to Tempe. "No. No, my dear. is no hurry."

Tempe giggled. "You sound trying to talk like Mr. Mer- "

"It's all right, Mr. Bailey. Mr. erfield said you would be in harge. You don't mind if we pick you a little, do you? Aren't you good-humored? I detest ill-hu- ored people."

Gayle spoke then.

"So is Gayle, Gayle. So there! I like you."

"And I like you. Where are your lasses?"

"Put them back on," Bill or- ed. "They make you pretty. Honest. If you take them off again, you're fired."

"No." Bill spoke decisively now. "All of you go home and make your arrangements to be here at dinner. Six o'clock. I shall want all six of you girls this eve- ."

"Some of it. But I'll tell you then if you are—oh, there, Mr. Tuck- ! You are Mr. Tucker, are you not?"

Jeremy had unexpectedly come the corridor, and had paused to stare owlishly at the trio of her young people. Thick-rimmed spectacles—quite unlike Tempe's—added to his owlish look.

"I—yes. Who—"

"I am Bill Bailey. Heard a lot of good things about you. Miss Dixon and Miss Hyde, Mr. Tucker."

"Oh," said little Tempe. "Hello." "Mr. Tucker is Mr. Merrifield's grandson, and a swell fellow to know, I'm sure." Bill was building friendship hurriedly. "Well, so long for the moment, Jeremy. We have duties just now, but we'll be seeing you. You figure to be in the library most of the day?"

"Why, I—yes. I—"

He hadn't told Jeremy a thing, but he had helped all three escape from Jeremy. Gayle was grateful for that. She wanted to know ex- actly what their plan of attack, so to speak, would be, before she was settled in The Oaks mansion for her strange campaign.

When Bill had dismissed all six of the hired girls, and she was with him in a Merrifield limousine being driven to her home for her clothes and things, Gayle thought of a million dangers or embarrass- ments which she would ultimately face. She wanted to talk over things carefully with this amazing Bill Bailey who had chanced along.

"Great business, Gayle!" he said expansively. "Rags to riches in three short hours. A 10-cent bus ride out, a $10 limousine ride back. Wait till I get my—"

"Hush, Bill! We still have plan- ning to do."

"Sure! But don't you want your mother to see you drive up in this car? It's half a block long. With a chauffeur. I bet a red hat he pops out to open the door."

The well-trained Merrifield chauffeur not only got out to open the door, he also waited respectfully to carry Gayle's bags when they should be ready. But Gayle knew she would be quite a while. There was mother to tell, packing to do, thinking to do. She sent the car on with Bill, who admittedly could pack more rapidly.

"Pick you up in an hour," Bill said in departing.

Still in a veritable daze, Gayle spent 20 minutes trying to make the matter clear to Mrs. Dixon. She talked incoherently, excitedly. If she wasn't very lucid it was because she didn't yet know much about her strange new job herself.

"I don't understand it, honey," Mrs. Dixon finally said, "but if your good judgment says it's all right, why then—"

"Oh, mother, it is! Mr. Merrifield is grand, really. And I'll be off your hands—no expense to you—and if I make good I'll have—"

"Yes! I'll ask him in to meet you when he comes back for me."

"No, no, dear. I mean the grandson. The one you are to draw out, or whatever. You must be ever so kind to him for Mr. Merrifield's sake, but I couldn't let you become involved so as to hurt you in any way, Gayle."

"Oh, mother! Surely not. Jeremy is a rabbit! You know what I mean. I'll just be a sort of hostess for The Oaks. I have lots of ideas about it all, if I can make this Bill Bailey understand."

"You speak enthusiastically of him. I want to meet him,"

She did meet him.

Handsome Bill Bailey spoke ever so graciously to Mrs. Dixon, and ended up by having lunch right there. Mrs. Dixon's quiet cottage proved to be a place where the two young people could think and plan.

They talked for a solid hour. They even made notes. They weighed, with a concern that was almost appalling at times, the possible complications in leading a bookish young man to the brink of romance, but they invariably ended by wanting to go ahead. Somehow the whole idea intrigued them. There is no fun in all the world like playing Cupid, they decided.

"You just be natural, Gayle," Bill counseled, noting that her mother nodded approval. Don't try to put on any sort of act. If you just be natural around Jeremy, nature will take its course. If he acts blind, I'll help him open his eyes."

"You won't ever do anything to hurt Jeremy," Mrs. Dixon begged. "Youths can be very impulsive, honey. Please don't get your young hearts too involved. Will you not?"

"Oh sure, mother. We promise."

But she said it lightly. She and Bill Bailey were laughing when they said goodby. Gayle promised to come home twice a week on a visit. She winked at her mother when the correct Merrifield chauffeur took her bags away.

The car had not been gone but a moment, though, when Mrs. Dixon went to the telephone. She looked up a number she had never called before, and was a little ill at ease about dialing it. But she had a definite purpose in mind.

When she had her party she introduced herself very carefully, made the necessary explanation about her calling, and then had her say.

"Thank you, madam; I am glad you called." Her listener was polite.

"And thank you, Mr. Merrifield. I knew you would understand. I am not quite as old as you, but I am a mature woman. Mature enough to be concerned often about the youth of today. I so want my daughter to be happy. To find a happy life some way. I could not have made love to a man for pay. Never!"

"Certainly not, Mrs. Dixon. But you need feel no concern about our younger generation. They are more honest and frank and generous than we ever were. Neither Jeremy nor Gayle will go against the dictates of their hearts, regardless of money. If so, they would make fools of themselves sooner or later, anyway. Now wouldn't they?"

"That's so," said Mrs. Dixon, nodding at the telephone. "That's so."

"And I also understand, madam, when you say you want your girl to find a happy life some way. That's exactly what I have in mind for Jeremy—a happy life. This is a troubled world, Mrs. Dixon. It is beset by a great many disturbances."

"That's so."

"And so we must help our youths to find happiness, some place. I—I found it by hard work, and almost lost it by worry and money making. Work still is important, I feel, but it is not everything. Some thinking has to be done also. I—our generation, has sort of messed up things; in governments, in economics, everywhere. Clean-minded youngsters like Jeremy and your Gayle have got to take over. I hope they can correct what we have done. Or haven't done."

He made quite an impressive lecture of it. Mrs. Dixon listened with mounting interest and respect. She had never seen Benjamin Merrifield, never spoken to him before. But here over the telephone he had come alive for her; a legend, come alive.

So, too, had a new philosophy been crystalized in her thinking, a new concept of youth and a new hope that young Americans personify.

She couldn't express her feelings when the conversation finally ended. All she could say was "Thank you. Thank you very, very much."

Motor Carriers Meet

Charleston, W. Va., May 7 (AP)—Hearings on proposed regulations governing preparation, filing and posting of rates by Motor Vehicle Carriers were started today by the Public Service Commission.

The regulations would include moving household goods, explosives and other dangerous materials and also adoption of a motor freight classification for use in filing tariffs. About thirty major freight lines representatives attended.

Thirty-two out of every 100 Swiss live in cities and towns. In 1850 only six in 100 lived in urban places.

Any Mother's Story...

EVERY story must have a Prologue. Often the prologue isn't written, or even put into words, but it's there just the same.

Twenty-three years ago next Sunday, the President proclaimed a national holiday, Mother's Day. Americans were delighted. Here was a bit of sentiment, albeit practical sentiment . . . it was a chance to demonstrate their loyal affections. It was a chance to consecrate a day in honor of Her who consecrates her whole life to others.

There is no more dramatic story in the whole world than Mother's. She has changed from the Victorian to the Modern more gracefully than we appreciate. Of course, at times she seems a little old-fashioned . . . but why shouldn't she?

When she was a little girl, her hair was in long pigtails and she wore starchy, lace-trimmed petticoats under the rustly taffeta dress. The most exciting day of the week was Sunday when she would be dressed in her "best" and would stroll on the board sidewalks or ride to church in the carriage.

And then, school! Young ladies of her day were taught the three R's and music and poetry and sewing. What a thrill graduation was! At last, she felt, she was grown up!

And she was . . . because it wasn't long after graduation when she met Father. They fell in love and were married. Soon she had a home of her own and a family of her own. She had every problem that a mother can have—illness, worry about money, changing ideas. But she remained as sweet and lovely as ever . . . grew more lovable, if possible.

One day, for a moment, she felt old . . . felt that she had outlived her usefulness. For Jeannie, her oldest daughter was married. It wasn't long before all the children left the sheltering refuge of her home. They were adults and thought that it was time they should make their own way in the world. Even though she sometimes had a small hurt deep down inside, she lived her regular life, cared for Father, enjoyed her friendships . . . and kept open house for any of her children that needed her help.

Now that we have our own homes and children, we understand better how much Mother means to us. And we know how much she appreciates a "Mother's Day." It's an nual afterword to the Prologue and Drama of her understanding and courageous life.

Your mother's background may be different. Your mother may have lived her life on a farm, she may have been a pioneer, a teacher, one who guided many others besides you; or she may have been born in a foreign land and uprooted from her accustomed way of life, she risked the ridicule and difficulties of a new language and a different culture so that her children would have that which she was denied. She may be a young-modern mother, a clubwoman and a patron of the arts. But she's still a generous, gentle lady . . . a mother—and a sentimentalist. Everything you do for her or give her on Mother's Day is a source of joy, and to her, a reward for everything she has done for you.

GAYLE DIXON to make love to his grandson.

JEREMY TUCKER, a shy student of theology, while

BILL BAILEY and six pretty girls are employed to help bring life and youth to the Merrifield mansion.

YESTERDAY: Discussing their strange case, Gayle and Bill talk over the problem and their good fortune in being able to live in the luxury of the Merrifield estate.

"Rags to riches in three short hours," observed Bill.

CHAPTER FIVE

"DID YOU want us to start right now, Mr. Bailey?" pretty little Tempe Hyde accosted him in a corridor of the Merrifield mansion. "The girls sort of appointed me as their spokesman."

"Humph!" Bill coughed, stalling for time. He looked hopefully, but futilely, at Gayle Dixon, who was with him. Then he turned back to Tempe. "No. No, my dear. There is no hurry."

Bill tried glaring, but Tempe only giggled some more.

"It's all right, Mr. Bailey. Mr. Merrifield said you would be in charge. You don't mind if we pick on you a little, do you? Aren't you good-humored? I detest ill-humored people."

Gayle spoke then.

"Everyone is going to be happy here. Miss Hyde—Tempe, I shall begin calling you first names. Mine is Gayle. Tempe is such a lovely name."

"So is Gayle, Gayle. So there! I like you."

"And I like you. Where are your glasses?"

"Oh, I snatched them off when I heard Mr. Bailey coming. Here they are."

"Put them back on," Bill ordered. "They make you pretty. Honest. If you take them off again, you're fired."

"No." Bill spoke decisively now. "All of you go home and make your arrangements to be here again at dinner. Six o'clock. I shall want all six of you girls this evening."

"Oh, will it be night work?"

"Some of it. But I'll tell you then. You are—oh, there, Mr. Tucker. You are Mr. Tucker, are you not?"

Jeremy had unexpectedly come into the corridor, and had paused to stare owlishly at the trio of the young people. Thick-rimmed spectacles—quite unlike Tempe's—added to his owlish look.

"Y-yes. Yes. Who—"

"I am Bill Bailey. Heard a lot of good things about you. Miss Dixon and Miss Hyde, Mr. Tucker."

"Oh," said little Tempe. "Hello."

"Mr. Tucker is Mr. Merrifield's grandson, and a swell fellow to know, I'm sure." Bill was building friendship hurriedly. "Well, so long for the moment, Jeremy. We have duties just now, but we'll be seeing you. You figure to be in the library most of the day?"

"Why, I—yes, I—"

"Good. Your work must be interesting. Hope you'll tell me about it later. 'Bye."

He hadn't told Jeremy a thing, but he had helped all three escape from Jeremy. Gayle was grateful for that. She wanted to know exactly what their plan of attack, so to speak, would be, before she got settled in The Oaks mansion for her strange campaign.

In Memoriams

In sad but loving memory of our daughter, Mary Louise Schanning, who departed this life May 7, 1936.

Although we miss her greatly,
Our darling went to Heaven
Just four years ago today.

You are gone but not forgotten
To a better home we know
But still our hearts are bleeding
Because we loved you so.

MOTHER AND DADDY. 5-7-1t-TN

In loving memory of our dear wife and mother, Josephine M. Wise, who died three years ago, May 7, 1937.

Just three years ago today
You left us to go far away,
We miss you more with every year,
To us you'll always be so dear.

HUSBAND AND DAUGHTER. 5-7-1t-TN

In loving remembrance of our dear husband and father, John N. Thomas, who died May 8, 1938.

When evening shades are falling,
And I'm sitting all alone,
In my heart there comes a longing,
If you only could come home.

To those who have a loved one,
Tender him with care,
For you do not know his value,
Until you see his vacant chair.

LOVING WIFE AND FAMILY. 5-8-1t-NT

DICK TRACY—Boy Meets Girl

Radcliffe and Johnson Victories Feature Voting

GOP Expects Ex-Ball Player To Beat Byron

Democratic Set-Up In County Seems More Muddled

(Complete unofficial Republican returns for Allegany county by precincts will be found on Page 12; and Democratic returns, on Page 9.)

The generals and the privates of Allegany county politics studied the election returns yesterday for whatever joys of success or excuses for failure they could find.

There was nothing very exciting to be dug out of the battle's aftermath.

Interest centered chiefly in Radcliffe's sweeping victory and the theft of Allegany county from under the noses of Attorney-General Walsh and most of the county's leaders.

'Amateurs' Win

The Baltimore Evening Sun put it this way: "Under the leadership of a group of 'amateurs', the Radcliffe forces battled toe-to-toe with the Walsh organization in industrial Cumberland won the election in the rural sections of the county."

The question of Democratic leadership in this county now becomes much more muddled than before, according to most observers, with nothing very spectacular expected to come of the Radcliffe victory.

The Prendergast-Reilly-Carpenti forces were crowing, naturally enough, and the Bruce supporters just couldn't hide their chagrin.

But Edward J. Ryan, campaign chairman for Bruce, made a statement congratulating Senator Radcliffe "for the successful support that he received from the people, and assured him of the support of the Bruce leaders in the November campaign.

Johnson's Victory Hailed

Michael J. Prendergast, head of Radcliffe's campaign here, expressed appreciation for the friendships he had formed during the campaign and added that they would constitute his only reward for a rebel victory.

About the only other election result that stirred the public's imagination and kept weary tongues wagging yesterday was the victory of one of baseball's immortals, the great Walter Johnson, over A. Charles Stewart, the Frostburg business man.

In what will probably be the most exciting race in the fall elections, at least for the people of Western Maryland, The Big Train, as baseball fans call Johnson, will try to unseat the Democrat's William D. Byron from the seat which he has hardly warmed up in the United States Congress.

Nice Easy Victory over Broening

Local friends of Stewart were muttering that he would have won if State Senator Robert Kimble had kept out of the race, but Republicans and Democrats alike agreed that the old ball player has a mighty good chance of sending Representative Byron back home to Williamsport.

In the only other primary contest, former Governor Nice easily out-voted Broening in Allegany county and added to his state-wide margin of victory.

The election failed to bring out more than thirty-five per cent of the Democratic voters in the county or only 6,599 out of 19,119.

Most Republicans Shun Polls

The Republicans showed even less interest, and were actually outvoted by the Democrats. The Republicans cast 6,190 votes for Congress, which is less than twenty-two per cent of the total registration of 23,685.

Presidential Candidate Dewey can claim enthusiastic backing by Allegany county Republicans, but support for him was not enthusiastic as it could have been.

There were 6,190 Republicans who voted for a congressional candidate, but only 4,330 who voted for Dewey. There were 539 voters who favored an uninstructed delegation, and more than 2,000 who apparently didn't care or couldn't make up their minds.

Bruce Leaders Elected

Only humor in the aftermath was the election of the Bruce-pledged delegates to the nominating convention, which means they will now have to go to the convention (at their own expense) and cast their votes for Senator Radcliffe.

This situation is unusual, but understandable, since all of the Bruce delegates are prominent Democratic leaders and most of them public officials, while the Radcliffe-pledged delegates were described by their own speakers as ordinary citizens.

Edward J. Ryan	3,674
Oliver H. Bruce Jr.	3,572
W. Earle Cobey	3,354
William C. Walsh	3,279
John J. McMullen	3,253
Patrick J. Stakem	3,045
Mrs. Elizabeth R. Menefee	3,027

James Paul Stakem	2,517
John F. Gallagher	2,110
Otho F. Dyer	1,938
Samuel T. Weatherholt	1,854
James E. Nixon	1,810

Tax Collector Threatens Sales On Big Scale

130 Properties Due To Go on Block, Says Conway

City Tax Collector James M. Conway announced yesterday he is preparing to advertise and sell property on which any city tax is due and owing.

Conway announced there are approximately 130 delinquent accounts for the year 1936 which will positively be advertised on or before May 20.

The tax collector also reported approximately 275 delinquent accounts for 1937 which will be advertised before June 30 unless payment is made prior to that time.

No Exception, Says Conway

Conway stressed the point that there will be no exceptions in these cases, since he is required to have 1936 and 1937 taxes cleared by the dates announced.

A push to collect delinquent accounts for the years 1938 and 1939 will follow so that all outstanding taxes owing the city will have been collected by Dec. 31, 1940.

Conway said yesterday that the lenient method of collection that has been employed in the past must end as the law in regard to collection of taxes is becoming increasingly severe.

Publication Considered

"It is for this reason that we must insist upon immediate payment of all taxes," Conway said yesterday. "If the taxes owing are not paid up the tax collector is compelled to take the only alternative he has, namely, that of selling the property for collection of the delinquent accounts."

Conway said the tax office was seriously considering adopting a method that has greatly stimulated tax collections in other localities. He said he was referring to the system of publishing a complete delinquent tax list in the city at various intervals throughout the year.

Successful Elsewhere

The publication of such a list gives the general public knowledge of those persons in arrears, he said.

The success of this system in other cities is regarded with great favor in the tax collector's office and the members of the force are hoping that such a list will have the same effect in Cumberland.

Young Republicans Hear Candidates In Ridgeley

The speakers at the club's weekly meeting, held in the office of Justice-of-the-Peace George E. Hiser at Ridgeley, were Justice Hiser, candidate for the House of Delegates; William C. Knieriem, candidate for justice-of-the-peace; Keith W. Skidmore, candidate for constable; Walter E. Spangler, candidate for the Mineral county school board; and Richard A. Biggs, candidate for the Republican executive committee.

While the club will remain neutral in the primary contests, it voted last night to establish headquarters at Justice Hiser's office to "get out the vote" election day.

The club will meet again next Tuesday night.

Two Moonshine Stills Raided, Man, 86, among Four Jailed

Authorities swooped down on two moonshining plants near Mexico farms early yesterday morning and arrested four persons, including an 86-year-old man and a 35-year-old woman.

Those jailed pending a preliminary hearing this afternoon before United States Commissioner James Alfred Avirett were booked as Joseph Baker, 86; William McMillan, about 42; his son, Charles McMillan, about 21; and Pearl Hefner, about 35.

The quartet was arrested in two raids conducted by Deputy United States Howard P. Loughrie, State Trooper George J. Miller and Sheriff Lucian C. Radcliffe.

Baker was arrested after the officers found a 35-gallon still concealed in the basement of a corncrib on his property, not far from the towpath along the old C&O canal near Mexico farms. The still was confiscated, along with 150 gallons of mash and a small quantity of whiskey, Loughrie reported.

Later, the officers nabbed the McMillans and the Hefner woman, said to be housekeeper for the pair. They were picked up after the authorities received information there was an illicit still in the house in which they lived about 200 yards from the canal bridge near Mexico Farms.

After lodging the four in jail, Loughrie obtained a search warrant early yesterday and returned to the McMillan residence, where he said he found a 35-gallon still, 150 gallons of mash and two quarts of illicit liquor.

Sharing Bach Studies With His Neighbors

An attentive audience last night heard John S. Gridley in his second annual program of Bach music at the Centre Street Methodist Church.

In his second of a scheduled twelve annual programs dedicated to interpreting the complete works of Bach, Mr. Gridley presented the "Passacaglia et Thema Fugatum in C Minor" and eight preludes and fugues.

Although Mr. Gridley indicated that his performances would be by no means perfect when he announced his plan last year, it is a well known fact that his study and interpretation of the famous composer is being watched with interest far beyond the environs of Cumberland.

"Sharing with Neighbors"

Mr. Gridley announced last year that he "expected to study a new volume each year and simply wished to share the result of each year's work with his neighbors"

Last night's second program clearly showed that Mr. Gridley's work, while possibly of interest to a limited number, is both important and significant.

It is pretty safe to assume that once Mr. Gridley has completed his study of Bach ten years from now, the praise of other able musicians will completely dwarf his own modest estimate of his accomplishment.

Tackles Tough Job

While there are those who might inquire what is particularly important about playing everything some composer wrote, the answer might be that it is commendable, in this day and age, when a man with many other duties, is ambitious enough to tackle a tough job simply because he considers it interesting.

And it is quite apparent that there are a number of people besides Mr. Gridley who are finding the programs of interest, as was attested by the audience last night.

While this reviewer must confess some of the Bach music strikes him as rather repetitous and colorless, the programs being presented by Mr. Gridley are giving persons really interested in music an opportunity to hear something heard only seven times in late years and something they will possibly never have an opportunity to again.

Program of Dignity

Mr. Gridley's program last night was one of great dignity. The majesty and magnificence of Bach's truly great passages were beautifully played.

Fruit Man Arrested As Parole Violator

Dusic was tried in Circuit Court in 1938 after being charged with embezzling $1,000 from the Uniontown fruit concern.

According to County Investigator Torrence J. Boyle, Dusic was charged with having taken the funds after being appointed manager of the Cumberland branch of the firm.

While it was stipulated in his parole that he make restitution to the fruit company, Boyle said yesterday he had made no payments since the time he was paroled.

He was arrested and booked at police headquarters by Detective Sergt. B. Frank Gaffney.

Both Drivers Freed On Crash Charges

Two motorists were both acquitted yesterday of charges resulting from an accident early Sunday morning on the Baltimore Pike near Nave's Crossroad.

Christopher Rowan, of Williams road, was charged with reckless driving. Bernard C. Walsh, 10 South Smallwood street, was charged with parking on the highway.

Walsh told Magistrate Frank A. Perdew he had stoped to examine a tire he thought was going flat and was lighting a cigaret when the Rowan car struck the rear end of his automobile.

John A. Coleman, of North Branch, arrested Sunday on Maryland avenue for carless driving, paid a $10 fine in Police Court yesterday morning.

'King of Kings' Held Over

This picture is a portrayal of the life of Christ and was one of the world's great silent pictures, said to have cost more than $2,000,000.

Columbia St. P-TA

Sixth grade pupils will provide the entertainment at the meeting of the Columbia Street Parent-Teacher Asociation at 7:30 o'clock tonight, according to an announcement by President Herman Miller. Committee reports will feature the business session.

Federals Hold Young Boxer

St. Louis Youth Had Brother's Car

A 21-year-old St. Louis plumber and boxer went "downtown" in his brother's car the long way last week and today found himself in the county jail here to await federal grand jury action on a charge of violating the Dyer national motor vehicle theft act.

The young man, Wesley P. Nichols, advanced a novel plea when he was arraigned yesterday, but United States Commissioner James Alfred Avirett ordered him jailed in default of $1,000 bond.

Nichols is accused of taking the car of his brother, Albert H. Nichols, in St. Louis April 30 and taking a cross-country jaunt until Friday, when he was picked up in Frostburg by State Trooper Carl G. Storm.

Peculiar Plea

Asked by the commissioner if he thought that meant "downtown Frostburg," the youth replied, "Well, he didn't say what state. He didn't say where I could take it."

Nichols said he decided to come to visit relatives and to seek work. He quit his job in St. Louis the day the left because his employer failed to give him a promised wage increase, he testified.

Vague on Destination

Although a little vague on just what his destination was, he said he was figuring on going to Trenton, N. J. at the suggestion of two hitch-hikers he picked up in Moundsville, W. Va.

Trooper Storm told how his suspicions were aroused when he spotted the three men, ill-kempt and roughly dressed, in a recent-model car, on which the spare was missing. He stopped the trio and asked to see the registration card, and when they were unable to produce one, he jailed them pending information from St. Louis authorities which verified his suspicion that the car was stolen.

Questioned as to what hapened to the spare, Nichols said he sold it, wheel and all, for $.40 when his funds ran out.

No Criminal, He Says

The one-time professional pugilist said he had no previous criminal record, although admitting he had been sent to the reform school for two years when a youngster of ten.

The only reason for his confinement that he knew of, he added, was because he wouldn't mind his grandmother and wouldn't go to school.

The hitch-hikers Nichols picked up were also held in the country jail, pending a check of their record by the FBI and Ohio authorities. They gave their names as Phillip Lucas, 19, and James Lucas, 18, brothers of Bellaire, Ohio.

Like Nichols, they said they were on the move seeking work.

Rotary Discusses Student Aid Fund

28 Youths Aided In Eleven Years

A report on its Student Loan Fund, representing its major service activity, occupied the attention of Rotary club members yesterday at their weekly luncheon at the Fort Cumberland hotel.

The fund was started in January, 1929, with the object of helping worthy students in their junior and senior years at college who could not complete their courses without some outside help. Club members were solicted for donations at various times until March, 1936, since which time there has been no solicitations of members.

The total received as donations from the members, according to the report, was $7,383, and the club donated $100. As the fund is of a revolving nature, it has been possible to lend a total of $10,894, of which $4,535 has been repaid. The balance on hand at present is $1,033.

The money lent was advanced to twenty-eight students, of whom nine have repaid their loans in full. At present the Fund is assisting three students in different universities. Loans are limited to $200 for each scholastic year.

Letters from these students and former students were read by Webster K. Edwards, members of the fund organization, and talks on the aid extended were made by Weber, C. L. Kopp, Thomas E. Gilchrist, Dr. A. H. Hawkins and Edgar J. Dawson, members of the fund organization, the last named being its treasurer. Dr. Hawkins made an appeal for further contributions to the fund.

Kopp presented some interesting statistics regarding high school education in Allegany county, which has been supplied for fifty-two years. In that period 5,100 students have been graduated from high schools of this county, 3,241 of them during the last ten years. Four hundred are to be graduated from the two local high schools this year.

Students entering the state university from high schools, of the counties, including Allegany county, are found to be better prepared for college work than those received from the high schools of Baltimore, Washington, Pennsylvania or Virginia, according to H. C. Byrd, state university president, Kopp said.

Walter W. Wittig and Alexander G. Close, of Frostburg; Michael Cunningham and James Hotchkiss, of Midland; James McGee, of Lonaconing; Robert Russell and Harry Andrews, of Barton; William J. Barnard, of Westernport; and George Kreitzburg, of Long.

Cases had been so few in the Western Maryland division of the Maryland district that the May and September terms of court scheduled for here were temporarily discontinued after September, 1938. Although several cases are awaiting disposition here now, the criminal docket is light and will probably be disposed of quickly.

Births Records Are Best Here

Only Four Per Cent Remain Unreported

Another orchid for Allegany county's health department was handed out this week by Dr. Y. Hedrick, chief of the bureau of statistics for the Maryland Health Department.

In an announcement made at a meeting of health officials in Baltimore, Dr. Hedrick stated that Allegany has the best record of any county in the state for percentage of births reported.

Dr. Hendrick said that nine[illegible] six per cent of all births in the county have been reported and brought up to date.

Drive Launched

Informed that four per cent of the county's births were still unreported, Dr. Joseph P. Frank, city and county health officer, immediately launched a drive to get them in.

All parents with children under twelve years of age who have not as yet had the births duly recorded should do so at once, the health officer said.

Dr. Franklin stressed the fact that today, due to such matters as old age pensions, it is vitally important that all births be properly recorded at the health department offices in City Hall, Cumberland.

Procedure

Once proof of a birth is submitted to the health department, the parents of a child should wait for a notice from the department announcing that the birth has been recorded, Dr. Franklin said.

If such announcements are not received between three and six months after being sent in, the parents should get in touch with the department, he said.

Dr. Franklin said yesterday that the birth index for the City of Cumberland and the county has now been brough up to date. The first records were made in 1898 and have been kept continuously since that time, he said.

Births

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest McCollough, of RFD 5, Cumberland, announce the birth of a daughter yesterday at Memorial hospital. Mrs. McCollough is the former Velia Wisman, who taught school in Cumberland for a number of years.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Crawford, 1[illegible] Decatur street, announce the birth of a son yesterday afternoon at Allegany hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Deen, 2[illegible] Columbia street, announce the birth of a son yesterday morning at Allegany hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Burcaw, 209 Reynolds street, announce the birth of a son yesterday morning at Memorial hospital.

GOP Expects Ex-Ball Player To Beat Byron

Democratic Set-Up In County Seems More Muddled

(Complete unofficial Republican returns for Allegany county by precincts will be found on Page 12; and Democratic returns, on Page 9.)

The generals and the privates of Allegany county politics studied the election returns yesterday for whatever joys of success or excuses for failure they could find.

There was nothing very exciting to be dug out of the battle's aftermath.

Interest centered chiefly in Radcliffe's sweeping victory and the theft of Allegany county from under the noses of Attorney-General Walsh and most of the county's leaders.

'Amateurs' Win'

The Baltimore Evening Sun put it this way: "Under the leadership of a group of 'amateurs', the Radcliffe forces battled toe-to-toe with the Walsh organization in industrial Cumberland won the election in the rural sections of the county."

The question of Democratic leadership in this county now becomes much more muddled than before, according to most observers, with nothing very spectacular expected to come of the Radcliffe victory.

The Prendergast-Reilly-Carpenti forces were crowing, naturally enough, and the Bruce supporters just couldn't hide their chagrin.

But Edward J. Ryan, campaign chairman for Bruce, made a statement congratulating Senator Radcliffe "for the successful support that he received from the people, and assured him of the support of the Bruce leaders in the November campaign.

Johnson's Victory Hailed

Michael J. Prendergast, head of Radcliffe's campaign here, expressed appreciation for the friendships he had formed during the campaign and added that they would constitute his only reward for a rebel victory.

About the only other election result that stirred the public's imagination and kept weary tongues wagging yesterday was the victory of one of baseball's immortals, the great Walter Johnson, over A. Charles Stewart, the Frostburg business man.

In what will probably be the most exciting race in the fall elections, at least for the people of Western Maryland, The Big Train, as baseball fans call Johnson, will try to unseat the Democrat's William D. Byron from the seat which he has hardly warmed up in the United States Congress.

Nice Easy Victory over Broening

Local friends of Stewart were muttering that he would have won if State Senator Robert Kimble had kept out of the race, but Republicans and Democrats alike agreed that the old ball player has a mighty good chance of sending Representative Byron back home to Williamsport.

In the only other primary contest, former Governor Nice easily out-voted Broening in Allegany county and added to his state-wide margin of victory.

The election failed to bring out more than thirty-five per cent of the Democratic voters in the county, or only 6,599 out of 19,119.

Most Republicans Shun Polls

The Republicans showed even less interest, and were actually outvoted by the Democrats. The Republicans cast 6,190 votes for Congress, which is less than twenty-two per cent of the total registration of 23,685.

Presidential Candidate Dewey can claim enthusiastic backing by Allegany county Republicans, but support for him was not enthusiastic as it could have been.

There were 6,190 Republicans who voted for a congressional candidate, but only 4,330 who voted for Dewey. There were 539 voters who favored an uninstructed delegation, and more than 2,000 who apparently didn't care or couldn't make up their minds.

Bruce Leaders Elected

Only humor in the aftermath was the election of the Bruce-pledged delegates to the nominating convention, which means they will now have to go to the convention (at their own expense) and cast their votes for Senator Radcliffe.

This situation is unusual, but understandable, since all of the Bruce delegates are prominent Democratic leaders and most of them public officials, while the Radcliffe-pledged delegates were described by their own speakers as ordinary citizens.

Edward J. Ryan	3,674
Oliver H. Bruce Jr.	3,572
W. Earle Cobey	3,354
William C. Walsh	3,279

Tax Collector Threatens Sales On Big Scale

130 Properties Due To Go on Block, Says Conway

City Tax Collector James M. Conway announced yesterday he is preparing to advertise and sell property on which any city tax is due and owing.

Conway announced there are approximately 130 delinquent accounts for the year 1936 which will positively be advertised on or before May 26.

The tax collector also reported approximately 275 delinquent accounts for 1937 which will be advertised before June 30 unless payment is made prior to that time.

No Exception, Says Conway

Conway stressed the point that there will be no exceptions in these cases, since he is required to have 1936 and 1937 taxes cleared by the dates announced.

A push to collect delinquent accounts for the years 1938 and 1939 will follow so that all outstanding taxes owing the city will have been collected by Dec. 31, 1940.

Conway said yesterday that the lenient method of collection that has been employed in the past must end as the law in regard to collection of taxes is becoming increasingly severe.

Publication Considered

"It is for this reason that we must insist upon immediate payment of all taxes," Conway said yesterday. "If the taxes owing are not paid up the tax collector is compelled to take the only alternative he has, namely, that of selling the property for collection of the delinquent accounts."

Conway said the tax office was seriously considering adopting a method that has greatly stimulated tax collections in other localities. He said he was referring to the system of publishing a complete delinquent tax list in the city at various intervals throughout the year.

Successful Elsewhere

The publication of such a list gives the general public knowledge of those persons in arrears, he said.

The success of this system in other cities is regarded with great favor in the tax collector's office and the members of the force are hoping that such a list will have the same effect in Cumberland.

Young Republicans Hear Candidates In Ridgeley

Thirty-five members of the Young Republican Club of Frankfort District heard talks last night by five candidates in the primary election scheduled for Tuesday.

The speakers at the club's weekly meeting, held in the office of Justice-of-the-Peace George E. Hiser at Ridgeley, were Justice Hiser, candidate for the House of Delegates; William C. Knieriem, candidate for justice-of-the-peace; Keith W. Skidmore, candidate for constable; Walter E. Spangler, candidate for the Mineral county school board; and Richard A. Biggs, candidate for the Republican executive committee.

While the club will remain neutral in the primary contests, it voted last night to establish headquarters at Justice Hiser's office to "get out the vote" election day.

The club will meet again next Tuesday night.

Two Moonshine Stills Raided, Man, 86, among Four Jailed

Authorities swooped down on two moonshining plants near Mexico farms early yesterday morning and arrested four persons, including an 86-year-old man and a 35-year-old woman.

Those jailed pending a preliminary hearing this afternoon before United States Commissioner James Alfred Avirett were booked as Joseph Baker, 86; William McMillan, about 42; his son, Charles McMillan, about 21; and Pearl Hefner, about 35.

The quartet was arrested in two raids conducted by Deputy United States Howard P. Loughrie, State Trooper George J. Miller and Sheriff Lucian C. Radcliffe.

Baker was arrested after the officers found a 35-gallon still concealed in the basement of a corncrib on his property, not far from the towpath along the old C&O canal near Mexico farms. The still was confiscated, along with 150 gallons of mash and a small quantity of whiskey, Loughrie reported.

Later, the officers nabbed the McMillans and the Hefner woman, said to be housekeeper for the pair. They were picked up after the authorities received information there was an illicit still in the house in which they lived about 200 yards from the canal bridge near Mexico Farms.

After lodging the four in jail, Loughrie obtained a search warrant early yesterday and returned to the McMillan residence, where he said he found a 35-gallon still, 150 gallons of mash and two quarts of illicit liquor.

Sharing Bach Studies With His Neighbors

An attentive audience last night heard John S. Gridley in his second annual program of Bach music at the Centre Street Methodist Church.

In his second of a scheduled twelve annual programs dedicated to interpreting the complete works of Bach, Mr. Gridley presented the "Passacaglia et Thema Fugatum in C Minor" and eight preludes and fugues.

Although Mr. Gridley indicated that his performances would be by no means perfect when he announced his plan last year, it is a well known fact that his study and interpretation of the famous composer is being watched with interest far beyond the environs of Cumberland.

"Sharing with Neighbors"

Mr. Gridley announced last year that he "expected to study a new volume each year and simply wished to share the result of each year's work with his neighbors"

Last night's second program clearly showed that Mr. Gridley's work, while possibly of interest to a limited number, is both important and significant.

It is pretty safe to assume that once Mr. Gridley has completed his study of Bach ten years from now, the praise of other able musicians will completely dwarf his own modest estimate of his accomplishment.

Tackles Tough Job

While there are those who might inquire what is particularly important about playing everything some composer wrote, the answer might be that it is commendable, in this day and age, when a man with many other duties, is ambitious enough to tackle a tough job simply because he considers it interesting.

And it is quite apparent that there are a number of people besides Mr. Gridley who are finding the programs of interest, as was attested by the audience last night.

While this reviewer must confess some of the Bach music strikes him as rather repetitous and colorless, the programs being presented by Mr. Gridley are giving persons really interested in music an opportunity to hear something heard only seven times in late years and something they will possibly never have an opportunity to again.

Program of Dignity

Mr. Gridley's program last night was one of great dignity. The masterly and magnificence of Bach's truly great passages were beautifully played.

Fruit Man Arrested As Parole Violator

Michael Dusic, paroled in 1938 on an embezzlement charge providing he pay back $1,000 to the Monheim Fruit Company, yesterday was arrested for violating the terms of his parole.

Dusic was tried in Circuit Court in 1938 after being charged with embezzling $1,000 from the Uniontown fruit concern.

According to County Investigator Torrence J. Boyle, Dusic was charged with having taken the funds after being appointed manager of the Cumberland branch of the firm.

While it was stipulated in his parole that he make restitution to the fruit company, Boyle said yesterday he had made no payments since the time he was paroled.

He was arrested and booked at police headquarters by Detective Sergt. B. Frank Gaffney.

Both Drivers Freed On Crash Charges

Two motorists were both acquitted yesterday of charges resulting from an accident early Sunday morning on the Baltimore Pike near Nave's Crossroad.

Christopher Rowan, of Williams road, was charged with reckless driving, Bernard C. Walsh, 10 South Smallwood street, was charged with parking on the highway.

Walsh told Magistrate Frank A. Perdew he had stoped to examine a tire he thought was going flat and was lighting a cigaret when the Rowan car struck the rear end of his automobile.

John A. Coleman, of North Branch, arrested Sunday on Maryland avenue for carless driving, paid a $10 fine in Police Court yesterday morning.

'King of Kings' Held Over

Cecil B. DeMille's picture, "King of Kings," which was shown last week in the social hall of the Centre Street Methodist Church, has been held over and will be shown every night this week.

This picture is a portrayal of the life of Christ and was one of the world's great silent pictures, said to have cost more than $2,000,000.

Full equipment is used and it requires about two hours to show the picture.

Federals Hold Young Boxer

St. Louis Youth Had Brother's Car

A 21-year-old St. Louis plumber and boxer went "downtown" in his brother's car the long way last week and today found himself in the county jail here to await federal grand jury action on a charge of violating the Dyer national motor vehicle theft act.

The young man, Wesley P. Nichols, advanced a novel plea when he was arraigned yesterday, but United States Commissioner James Alfred Avirett ordered him jailed in default of $1,000 bond.

Nichols is accused of taking the car of his brother, Albert H. Nichols, in St. Louis April 30 and taking a cross-country jaunt until Friday, when he was picked up in Frostburg by State Trooper Carl G. Storm.

Peculiar Plea

At a preliminary hearing before Commissioner Avirett, Nichols pleaded "guilty of driving the car across state lines, but not guilty of stealing it."

The defendant argued that he had his brother's permission to take the car to go "downtown."

Asked by the commissioner if he thought that meant "downtown Frostburg," the youth replied, "Well, he didn't say what state. He didn't say where I could take it."

Nichols said he decided to come to visit relatives and to seek work. He quit his job in St. Louis the day the left because his employer failed to give him a promised wage increase, he testified.

Vague on Destination

Although a little vague on just what his destination was, he said he was figuring on going to Trenton, N. J. at the suggestion of two hitch-hikers he picked up in Moundsville, W. Va.

Trooper Storm told how his suspicions were aroused when he spotted the three men, ill-kempt and roughly dressed, in a recent-model car, on which the spare was missing. He stopped the trio and asked to see the registration card, and when they were unable to produce one, he jailed them pending information from St. Louis authorities which verified his suspicion that the car was stolen.

Questioned as to what hapened to the spare, Nichols said he sold it, wheel and all, for $40 when his funds ran out.

No Criminal, He Says

The one-time professional pugilist said he had no previous criminal record, although admitting he had been sent to the reform school for two years when a youngster of ten.

The only reason for his confinement that he knew of, he added, was because he wouldn't mind his grandmother and wouldn't go to school.

The hitch-hikers Nichols picked up were also held in the country jail, pending a check of their record by the FBI and Ohio authorities. They gave their names as Phillip Lucas, 19, and James Lucas, 18, brothers of Bellaire, Ohio.

Like Nichols, they said they were on the move seeking work.

Rotary Discusses Student Aid Fund

28 Youths Aided In Eleven Years

A report on its Student Loan Fund, representing its major service activity, occupied the attention of Rotary club members yesterday at their weekly luncheon at the Fort Cumberland hotel.

The report was presented by Arthur J. Weber, chairman of the fund organization.

The fund was started in January, 1929, with the object of helping worthy students in their junior and senior years at college who could not complete their courses without some outside help. Club members were solicted for donations at various times until March, 1936, since which time there has been no solicitations of members.

The total received as donations from the members, according to the report, was $7,383, and the club donated $100. As the fund is of a revolving nature, it has been possible to lend a total of $10,894, of which $4,535 has been repaid. The balance on hand at present is $1,033.

The money lent was advanced to twenty-eight students, of whom nine have repaid their loans in full. At present the Fund is assisting three students in different universities. Loans are limited to $200 for each scholastic year.

Letters from these students and former students were read by Webster K. Edwards, members of the fund organization, and talks on the aid extended were made by Weber, C. L. Kopp, Thomas E. Gilchrist, Dr. A. H. Hawkins and Edgar J. Dawson, members of the fund organization the last named being its treasurer. Dr. Hawkins made an appeal for further contributions to the fund.

Kopp presented some interesting statistics regarding high school education in Allegany county, which has been supplied for fifty-two years. In that period 5,100 students have been graduated from high schools of this county, 3,241 of them during the last ten years. Four hundred are to be graduated from the two local high schools this year.

Students entering the state university from high schools, of the counties, including Allegany county, are found to be better prepared for college work than those received from the high schools of Baltimore, Washington, Pennsylvania or Virginia, according to H. C. Byrd, state university president, Kopp said.
